Distance and Sympathy.
Comparing Monies.
The World Fixes Us.
Valuable Railroads.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

DISTANCE KILLS sympathy. Ten million dead on the planet Mars, if there be any inhabitants there to die, would interest us very mildly.

News that a next door neighbor has died is more important than today's dreadful news of one thousand killed by drought in Central China. We tell ourselves that we are sorry for those inhabitants of Shensi province, whose lands, formerly fertile, have had no rain since 1928, and whose suffering is made worse by outbreaks of cannibalism and attacks by wolves and banditry.

We may at least learn to take our own troubles less seriously when we read such news.

AMERICA AND Britain seek to "stabilize currencies," establishing a permanent comparative value for the dollar and pound sterling. Many will ask:

"How can that be done? How can you compare the value of the words 'Bank of England' on a white note, and the words 'United States' on a green paper?"

DOES NOT the value of a nation's money depend on the character and, especially, on the wealth of the nation that issues it? Would it not be simpler to manage our currency conservatively, wisely, honestly, and say to the world: "THIS MONEY WILL BUY ANYTHING PRODUCED IN THE UNITED STATES, PAY ANY DEBT OWING THE UNITED STATES, OR ANY OF ITS CITIZENS. IF YOU DON'T WANT SUCH DOLLARS, YOU NEED NOT TAKE THEM."

IT IS GOOD, encouraging news that automobile production in May was twice what it was in May, 1932.

And very interesting is the fact that newspaper messages now go from England to India, Calcutta to Delhi, 7,200 miles "by word of mouth," over the telephone.

Men continue to make progress, in spite of their fighting, swindling and hating. Henry Ford, discussing the thirtieth anniversary of his company, celebrated yesterday, and the fortieth anniversary of his manufacture of an automobile engine, put it well:

"People will go on trying to fix the world, and the world will continue to fix people. It is the world that does the job, not the individual who fixes."

EVERY BUSINESS man will appreciate Henry Ford's reply when asked what he thought about the "industrial recovery bill."

"How government agents are to improve the quality of the thousands of kinds of goods manufactured, lower the cost of their production and so get these goods to the people at less cost, I don't know. I WAS ALWAYS UNDER THE IMPRESSION THAT TO MANAGE A BUSINESS PROPERLY YOU OUGHT TO KNOW SOMETHING ABOUT IT."

THE INTERSTATE Commerce Commission says United States railroads are worth twenty-six billion, ninety-one million dollars.

They will be worth more than that to their owners when their invaluable, non-stop rights of way are fully used by light vehicles, going 125 to 150 miles an hour, at less than half the present fares.

The modern Pullman car, weighing 180,000 pounds or more, now carries fewer than 20 passengers on the average, or 9,000 pounds of vehicle for each passenger. Suppose a small automobile, carrying five, weighing 45,000 pounds. It would be in the modern railroad class, as regards transportation.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT supports the plan to build 32 fighting ships, good news for the unemployment situation, and for the national defense.

No out-of-date, costly battleship is planned, to provide an easy target for airplanes.

Two airplane carriers and four submarines are the most encouraging items in the program. But all, light cruisers, destroyers and gunboats, are needed and useful.

Real national defense will come with a really adequate air force and submarine fleet.

RAILROADS OF the Trunk Line Association announce another reduction in the round trip fare to Chicago. You may go and come for 83⅓ per cent the usual one-way ticket. The Pullman Company carries you for a one-way fare, plus 25 cents.

You should see Chicago's exposition if you can. The modern small automobile, in good condition, will carry five or six there and back from New York or any point within 1,000 miles, for about twelve dollars' worth of gas and oil.

THE AUTOMOBILE tire industry, encouraged for a little while by the gain in automobile building, now feels the weight of such multiple taxation as would have amazed our tea-taxed ancestors of 1776. The tire manufacturer is taxed on his income. He has an excise tax laid directly on tires. He is affected and discouraged by the additional tax on gasoline, which diminishes use of tires. Now comes a "process tax" on the cotton fabric that goes into his tires

King George was content to tax the tea. He did not tax the cup, saucer and spoon.

Maug Taunts Police And Guards in Own Story of Pen Break

Killer Says 'Dumb Bunch' at Prison Unwittingly Helped to Make Ladder Used in Escape

A "dumb" guard unwittingly aided John Maug and his pal Edward Turpac to slide down the grim, gray walls of Western Penitentiary two months ago, Maug revealed in an interview with the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph after his capture in Lakewood, O., during an attempted robbery. In the following article Maug tells his own story.

By JOHN MAUG

CLEVELAND, O., June 17.—Me and the other three fellows planned from the start to make a break as soon as we could. I don't think we had been in more than 10 days before we started to work, and I think it was only 80 days after we were put in the pen that we mooged out of there.

They are a dumb bunch there. Eddy and I made a rope by collecting threads in the weaving shops. It took us quite a while to make it because it had to be 90 feet long to carry us over the wall. Eddy made the ladder in the woodworking shop.

We bought the wood and told the guard we were making a table. He himself had the pieces cut for us. We made the ladder in sections to fit together like the ones the window cleaners use. We hid all this junk in the shops.

On the day we made the break, we did not go back into our cells at the regular washup period just before supper. All of us made dummies to put on the bed. We filled trousers with waste paper and put pillows inside sweaters, and with slippers and socks attached, the dummy would fool anybody. When our doors didn't open at the time we were supposed to come out for supper, the dumb guards didn't suspect any-

Fugitives Jested With Police During Hunt

Hunted by the armed forces of Allegheny County and Pittsburgh, John Maug found time to jest with the police pursuing him, Maug revealed in an interview today.

He sent a "moo-cow" to Detectives Frank Morgan and his son, Thomas, and the $10,000 reward "came out." Maug wrote:

"Nice fellows, those Morgans. They are the ones who got the $10,000 reward out. I know why, too. Eddy and I picked up a little box in a funny house. It was one of those things that makes a mooing sound when you pick it up. We sent it to the Morgans after we escaped."

Morgan today denied he had received a "moo-cow" from Maug.

KILLER MAUG RETURNING TO 'STIR'

Turpac Also on Way, Opposing Escort Of County 'Bulls'

By WALTON WOODS

CLEVELAND, O., June 17.—Johnny Maug and Edward Turpac, waiving extradition, today were on their way back to "stir."

They will be accompanied to Pittsburgh by William E. Gaffney, special investigator of the Western Penitentiary, from which they escaped April 21.

Defiant, sullen, Turpac declared:

"But we aren't going back with the county bulls. We'll go back without opposing extradition if we're allowed to go back with Gaffney, nobody else."

But Chief of County Detectives George W. Murren merely smiled as Turpac made his statement. He said:

"I'm taking no chances."

Murren brought four of his sleuths and two fast cars into Lakewood, Cleveland suburb, last night. He also brought riot guns and leg irons.

The fugitives have been under arrest in Lakewood since Thursday night. The Allegheny County Commissioners' $10,000 reward for their capture will go to Delmar Potts and Edward Graske, Lake-

GUNS BLAZE AT FLEEING TRIO

Shots blazed in Avalon early today as three burglar suspects attempted to escape from their captor, Chief of Police Louis Luckan.

Detected as they were said to have been burglarizing a vegetable stand of a chain store, Luckan drew his gun and commanded the trio to surrender. He then boarded their automobile truck.

As the trio, under guard of the officer, neared the Avalon Police Station, one of the suspects jumped and attempted to escape. He was arrested by Patrolman Arthur Hallewell.

Speeding their machine, the remaining prisoners dashed over two streets, attempting to dislodge the police chief from the running board.

Pressing his gun to the side of one of the men, Chief Luckan forced the driver to stop. As the machine stopped one of the suspects leaped to the street and escaped as the police chief opened fire.

The driver surrendered.

At the Avalon Police Station the suspects said they were Frank Johnson and Andy Wisneck, both of 179 Lodi way, Lawrenceville.

Industrial Drive Here Launched

Pittsburgh industrial leaders today launched a concerted drive to produce more jobs and to stimulate the rate of business activity under the provisions of the Industrial Recovery Act.

With all eyes turned toward Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the bill and virtual industrial dictator, plans were being rushed to complete codes governing the operations of coal, steel and oil, all vital industries to Pennsylvania.

Gen. Johnson's first official act following his appointment was to make a radio address over station WCAE and a nation-wide network. The address was to have been delivered at the National Coal Association convention at Chicago. Weather conditions made it impossible for him to proceed beyond Pittsburgh, so the address was delivered here.

WARNS OF RELAPSE

He warned that unless men are put to work and wages are raised as rapidly as prices, there is danger of a depression relapse.

To take advantage of the provisions of the bill for aiding public works construction, Gov. Gifford Pinchot yesterday appointed an emergency public works board to plan construction activities, and today wrote to Gen. Johnson to ask for a special arrangement to assist Pennsylvania in financing its construction work.

He declared that Pennsylvania's part in the recovery program depends upon the willingness of federal authorities to advance funds to the state to complete a series of projects.

His letter declared that the Pennsylvania constitution makes

BOSTON HAILS ROOSEVELT

BOSTON, June 17.—(INS.)—Acclaimed by thousands, President Roosevelt began his vacation today by motoring from South Station to Groton to see his two sons before going to Marion to begin a yachting cruise.

Boston gave the nation's chief a genuine and enthusiastic greeting

A crowd estimated at 20,000 men, women and children, behind a shoulder-to-shoulder guard of 600 police, passed inside and outside South Station and cheered the President.

Boston police carried orders to "face the crowds"—to make certain that no mishap befell the President while he was in Boston.

'LOVE FEAST' CLEARS KERR

He and Waldschmidt 'Get Together' in Fund Mixup

City Controller James P. Kerr in rapid succession stood accused of responsibility for the city fund mixup in the Pennsylvania Trust Company and then "exonerated" by a succession of "statements," which has newspapermen wondering today just what the next move will be.

Both accusation and exoneration were made by City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt.

The exoneration came after Kerr had obligingly exonerated Waldschmidt of responsibility for blame in the same fund mixup involving the $2,400,000 city deposit placed in the Pennsylvania Trust Company without proper security.

TALK IT OVER

Waldschmidt, who has been under fire because of the fact that he was a director in the bank at the time the deposit was made, late yesterday issued a statement in which he cited law to show that the City Controller as well as the City Treasurer is responsible for city funds.

After a conference with Controller Kerr, Waldschmidt took back that part of his statement which concerned the Controller, tearing the statements which he had previously handed newspapermen in half and handing back the upper

Bond Furnished By Tom Coyne in Jury 'Fix' Case

Tom Coyne slipped into the courthouse, posted $2,500 bond, and slipped out again, today.

Only the bond clerk, Henry Lennon, of District Attorney A. T. Park's office, saw Coyne and his bondsman, R. F. Alexander, a contractor, of 3430 Ward street.

Coyne, brother of State Senator James J. Coyne, is one of five men named in an alleged plot to "fix" the jury panel selected to try the Monaca Club liquor-gambling case, in which Tom Coyne is one of three defendants.

Coyne entered the district attorney's office by a rear door before any of the assistant prosecutors had arrived. He left the courthouse without being observed.

His bond today is to guarantee his appearance for a hearing before Justice of the Peace Margaret Morgan, of Sewickley, on an embracery charge.

Four other defendants in the "fix" case, charged with conspiracy, waived hearings last night and were held for court.

They are Charles Fahey, of Mt. Washington, employe in the state auditor general's Pittsburgh office; Charles L. O'Connell, Leetsdale politician; Ralph LaRocco, subordinate county delinquent tax collector, Coraopolis, and Edward E. Costello, high constable of Glenfield.

VICTIM OF AUTO LEAP DIES

Anna B. Koval, 22, 747 Harden drive, Bellevue, lay dead in the morgue today while county detectives tried to find the reason she jumped from the car of Joseph Reithel, Jr., 23, of 3824 Windgap road, and fractured her skull Thursday night.

Anna was a maid at the Harden drive place, to which Reithel was returning her when she jumped.

Reithe, free on $1,000 bail following his arrest after the accident, was to be re-arrested today.

He had told police he knew of no reason why Anna should take her fatal leap. They had not quarreled, he said.

An autopsy of the dead maid's body was planned after detectives questioned Reithel.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 17.—Four officers and a prisoner were killed and another officer was wounded here today when the officers engaged in a battle with gunmen at the Union Station.

The officers were returning Prisoner Frank Nash, an escaped convict from Leavenworth penitentiary, who was captured yesterday near McAlester, Oklahoma.

As the officers, who had been met by city detectives, emerged from the train, they were met by a gang of gunmen.

The gunmen attempted to wrest Nash from the policemen. They found him chained to two of the officers.

OFFICER OPENS FIRE

Raymond J. Caffrey, of the Department of Justice, opened fire with his revolver.

The bandits returned the fire.

The station was crowded with the early morning rush of traffic and it was impossible to learn the number of gunmen who attempted to rescue Nash.

Mencken Here to See Niece Graduated

Looking very angelic, like a jovial cherub, H. L. Mencken, the most irreverent wit in America, blew into Pittsburgh this morning to attend the graduation of his niece, Virginia, daughter of his brother, Charles, now a resident of Crafton.

Mencken is jubilant and downhearted at the same time. Jubilant because, as he says, "beer is coming back soon." Downhearted because the Nazis have not burned any of his books.

His view of Herr Hitler is unique. "You can't fight a joke," he says. The idea of a housepainter in the seat of the mighty Bismarck is a joke, as it appears to Mencken. The Mencken family is allied with the Bismarck family on the maternal side.

Mencken, his brother, and George Seibel, dramatic and literary editor of the Sun-Telegraph, met in a private room of the William Penn Hotel. It was a first meeting, Mencken and Seibel having been in correspondence for more than 30 years, but never meeting face to face.

Mencken is leaving tonight for New York on the Pennsylvania Railroad, after he has seen his niece graduated. He is proud of the fact that now there will be one member of his family who is educated and can read and write.

U. S. URGES 10 PER CENT REDUCTION IN WORLD TARIFFS

PARLEY GIVEN AMERICAN PROPOSAL

European Nations in Drive for Dollar Stabilization

LONDON, June 17.—(AP.)—A proposal for a general 10 per cent reduction in tariffs has been submitted to the economic commission of the world Economic Conference by the American delegation, it was learned today.

This topic, presented for consideration, was submitted among others at the request of the chairman, who asked the various delegations to file briefs to assist in making up the commission's agenda.

Other suggestions from the Americans included:

A continuation of the tariff truce.

Bilateral trade agreements.

Compensation and clearance agreements.

ECONOMIC COMMISSION

The economic commission is expected to deal chiefly with tariffs. It was pointed out in American quarters that the suggestions made by the United States delegation were merely topics for consideration.

Meanwhile, negotiations between representatives of the Reichsbank and Germany's foreign long-term creditors was understood in authoritative quarters today to be snarled by a Dutch and Swiss rejection of certain proposals by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Reichsbank president.

American Ambassador-at-Large Norman H. Davis was in London today with the expressed purpose of talking over disarmament developments with Secretary of State Hull.

Europe Pressing U. S. To Stabilize Dollar

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(INS.)—Having maneuvered the United States out of more than $100,000,000 on the June 15 debt payments, Europe today sought to force this government's hand on the question of currency stabilization at the World Economic Conference.

Word was received in official quarters here that tremendous pressure is being brought to bear by France at London to force the United States into an agreement for immediate stabilization of the dollar.

This government, however, has no intention of being forced into such an agreement prematurely, it was stated on high authority.

Furthermore, London reports that immediate stabilization of currencies was near at hand were described as premature.

In fact, they were regarded as propaganda designed to make it appear that this government was desirous of immediate stabilization.

COUGHLIN HITS LONDON PARLEY

NEW YORK, June 17.—(AP.)—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, of Royal Oak, Mich., in a statement yesterday termed delegates at the London Economic Conference "nothing but toy balloons who are exploring beyond the clouds of international intrigue."

He said:

"Perhaps they will be punctured. Nevertheless, they will serve their purpose by indicating to President Roosevelt where lies the storm center of the world's troubles."

Father Coughlin predicted that within 60 days "official statements and decisions will be made by the chief executive of the United States which will have the effect of introducing to America and the world one of the greatest eras of prosperity which was ever experienced."

Accountants Name Pittsburgher Head

READING, Pa., June 17.—(AP.)—Election of officers marks the closing session of the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants' convention today.

The voting will be routine, however, for Adrian Sanderbeck, of Pittsburgh, was nominated without opposition at last night's session to succeed the retiring president, William R. Main, of Philadelphia. Clarence L. Turner was nominated for vice president and Robert J. Bennett, of Philadelphia, to suceed himself as secretary.

Wall Street Runs U. S., Butler Tells Vets

ALLENTOWN, Pa., June 17.—(AP.)—Prepared for trouble if the Khaki Shirts attempt to "tag on," the Pennsylvania encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars holds its parade today, the most colorful feature of the organization's annual meeting.

Among the resolutions adopted at yesterday's sessions was one denouncing the Khaki Shirts.

Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, retired Marine officer, told the veterans:

"It's high time that you fellows realized that this nation is run by Wall street and not by Washington."

Denouncing the federal government's reduction of veterans' compensation, Gen. Butler called for organized protests against the action.

The Rev. James R. Cox, of Pittsburgh, the state chaplain, also addressed the veterans yesterday. He said:

"Veterans must keep their attention on the activities of such organizations as the Economy League and such men as Admiral Byrd. It is easy for Admiral Byrd to be a patriot with a $6,500 a year pension. I have no time for swivel chair patriots who try to saddle taxes on the masses and permit millionaires to avoid their income tax."

half, in which the Controller was not mentioned.

Then Dr. Kerr made the statement which absolved Waldschmidt from any part in the transaction with the bank.

It was a strange series of events at City Hall which led up to the conference of Kerr and Waldschmidt and the issuing of a statement satisfactory to both.

Mayor John S. Herron had called Waldschmidt into conference earlier in the day and asked him to make his position clear in the Pennsylvania Trust Company affair.

Mayor Herron said he would reserve judgment until he saw Waldschmidt's answer.

Late in the day, Waldschmidt appeared with two type-written sheets. He quoted from various sections of the bank depository ordinances, which define the duties of the City Treasurer and the Controller in protecting city money.

HASTY CONFERENCE

A statement was then sought from Controller Kerr, who called Waldschmidt into a hasty conference. Reporters were asked to turn over the statements issued by Waldschmidt, and this was done in his presence. Waldschmidt tore in half the statement which finally went to the papers. This operation complete, Controller Kerr said:

"Mr. Waldschmidt, as director of the bank was ill at the time of this transaction (the city deposit in the Pennsylvania Trust Company) and knew nothing about it. The arrangement between the City of Pittsburgh and the Pennsylvania Trust Company was made by officials of the bank and at that time the City Treasurer, and I have talked to several of the directors and they knew nothing or this agreement for weeks after it was consumated. It was not submitted to the board of directors of the bank for their approval, I later learned. When the deposit was made, City Treasurer R. D. Schooley assured Mr. Waldschmidt and me that all deposits in banks were adequately insured."

At this point Waldschmidt suggested that Controller Kerr be more specific about the bank director who at a late date demanded that the city deposit $600,000 in addition to the $2,400,000 already in the bank.

KERR WAS 'SUSPICIOUS'

Controller Kerr said:

"It was not Mr. Waldschmidt who made the demand. I don't think he knew anything about it at the time we had our meeting."

Controller Kerr revealed that he was suspicious of the bid made by the Pennsylvania Trust Company for the deposits. It was 3.85 per cent, he said, and seemed unusually high. He said he suggested to the City Treasurer that he not award the contract to the Pennsylvania Trust Company, and that Schooley replied:

"I'm the City Treasurer."

Controller Kerr was then asked by a reporter what the City Controller's duties consist of, and he replied:

"The Controller's duty is to watch the city money, but when the city treasurer gives his word, he (the Controller) must take that word."

STATEMENT TO REPORTERS

Waldschmidt denied he, as a director of the bank, knew of the city deposit. The portion of his statement that was given to reporters follows:

"As city solicitor it is my duty to pass upon legal questions submitted to me.

"The bank depository ordinances, which were passed upon by me, speak for themselves because if these ordinances are carried out by the city officials to whose care the city money is entrusted no such condition could possibly arise.

"It is not my intention or desire to criticize or condemn any other city official, but it is unfair and unjust to attempt to make me responsible for duties which belong to others.

"The city solicitor has nothing to do with the bank deposits made by the city treasurer. The city solicitor has nothing to do with security given by the banks for the city deposits."

THE TORN PORTION

The part of the statement torn away stated that the controller and the city treasurer are the city officials responsible for the city funds and quoted the depository ordinances on the official duties of each.

With the joint interview with controller and city solicitor over, Mayor Herron was asked his opinion of the joint statement and said:

"The statement of Mr. Waldschmidt coupled with that of Dr. Kerr proves conclusively Mr. Waldschmidt was not involved in any way with the transaction between the city and the Pennsylvania Trust Company."

PRESIDENT ASKS REDUCTION IN WORK HOURS

Urges 'Living Wage' With Shorter Week

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt intends to put all the immediate emphasis of the industrial control program on reduction of working hours with payment of a "living wage" for the shortened labor week.

This purpose was indicated clearly in a public statement, issued just before starting on his New England vacation, in which he coupled the declaration that the bill's purpose was "to put people back to work," with an urgent request that industry forgo quick profits and devote itself to increasing the country's purchasing power before raising prices.

INDUSTRIAL CODES

Limitation of working hours and job-spreading is to be an integral part of the industrial codes under which the government will let related businesses cooperate without interference from the anti-trust laws.

Eventually the President said he wants to use the law "to plan for a better future" but the first emergency job is going to be "to get many hundreds of thousands of the unemployed back on the payroll by snowfall." He said:

"The idea is simply for employers to hire more men to do the existing work by reducing the work-hours of each man's week and at the same time paying a living wage for the shorter week."

APPLICATION OF LAW

Whether a basic 30-hour week, as proposed by an earlier law considered by Congress, will be used as a yard-stick by the government in passing upon the codes submitted for its approval, he did not indicate, leaving this to be unfolded in the practical application of the law.

The President warned "that the anti-trust laws still stand firmly," to block any trade restraint or price-fixing which allows inordinate profits or unfairly high prices.

To labor, the President issued a special call for co-operation:

"This is not a law to foment discord and it will not be executed as such. This is a time for mutual confidence and help, and we can safely rely on the sense of fair play among all Americans to assure every industry which now moves forward promptly in this united drive against depression that its workers will be with it to a man."

JEALOUS MATE SLAYS RIVAL

MARIETTA, O., June 17.—(INS.)—Believed to have been infuriated by jealousy, James Arbor, 65, today shot and killed Albert Newton, 58, and then committed suicide after firing several shots at his wife.

The double tragedy took place in the apartment of Arbor's wife.

Mrs. Arbor escaped the murderous gunfire of her husband by climing through a window to a porch roof.

Neighbors said the Arbors had been estranged for some time. They were divorced two years ago, but were remarried last February. Two months following their second marriage the couple separated again.

REED LAUNCHES G. O. P. WAR ON ROOSEVELT

'Recovery' Will Cost Public 'Deadly Price,' Senator Declares

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 17.—Conservative Republican leadership today was preparing to follow the leadership of Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, who has sounded the first G. O. P. "call to arms," against President Roosevelt's financial and industrial recovery program.

Declaring that the United States must be prepared to pay "a deadly price" for the administration's recently enacted recovery program, the Pennsylvanian said that Republicans had no apologies to offer for their opposition to currency inflation, repeal of the gold clause in our bonded indebtedness, or the President's surrender to our European debtors, and in days to come the Republican Party would point with pride to the record made by its representatives in the special session of the Seventy-third Congress.

VIGOROUS ATTACK

The senator's vigorous attack on President Roosevelt's inflationary and recovery program is interpreted here as the opening wedge which the Old Guard will drive deeper and deeper into what they term is the administration's attempt to legislate better times.

The national recovery bill, Reed said, will only more firmly intrench bureaucrats in Washington and throw the budget further out of balance than it now is. Reed declared:

"I have never seen a more intense partizanship than that which has been displayed by the Democratic administration throughout the last Congress. It has made no effort to answer the arguments of the Republican minority, but has mercilessly used the club of patronage to whip the Democratic members into voting against their best judgment.

"The Democratic inflation program has caused a rise in commodity and security prices as every one knew it would. That rise has blinded many of our people to the true nature of the administration's program. But the country will realize before long that it has paid a deadly price for a short lived boom.

"The effect of the industrial bill will depend entirely on the manner in which it is administered. Many manufacturers think it will enable them to fix prices as they please. If the administration permits this to be done, the consumers of the country will protest bitterly."

Senator Reed explained that much of his mail complained that he had not supported the President in maintaining a balanced budget. But he is still of the opinion that the budget is further out of balance than during any year since the World War.

The Senator said:

"The plain truth is that the country's debt is increasing by leaps and bounds."

New Castle Works Now on Full Time

NEW CASTLE, Pa., June 17.—(AP.)—The American Sheet and Tin Plate Company now has the hot mills at its New Castle works on a 100 per cent basis. Finishing departments except tinning also will resume, officials announce.

W. Keith McAfee, president of the Universal Sanitary Manufacturing Company, announced a 10 per cent increase in pay for the firm's 160 employes.

URGES OLD AGE PENSIONS

County Court Judge M. A. Musmanno, speaking before a meeting of the Seventh Ward Community Club at the Shakespeare School last night, said that unless an extra session of the Legislature is called before August 7, action on the old age pension amendment to the Constitution will not be permitted voters before 1938.

He said:

"By enthusiastic meetings of this kind you may be able to persuade the Legislature to correct the deficiencies of the last session by having it enact old age pension legislation, minimum wage laws, and such other laws as may be necessary to eradicate that dreadful blot on the escutcheon of our commonwealth—the sweatshop."

Depositors to Hear Bank Opening Plan

Stockholders, depositors and others are to hear an explanation of reorganization plans for the First National Bank of Wilkinsburg at a meeting Monday night in the Penn-Lincoln Hotel, Wilkinsburg. The bank is now operated by Conservator Martin L. Moore. About $250,000 of new capital has been raised.

HARRISBURG, June 17.—(INS.)—Complaint of the City of Monessen against the West Penn Power Company, alleging the utility concern failed to comply with terms of a street lighting contract, was dismissed by the Public Service Commission.

Owners Facing Home Loss Told To Ask Stay

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP.)—Don't let anyone foreclose the mortgage on your home if you think the $2,000,000,000 Federal Mortgage Relief Fund can help you. Go to court and ask a stay.

That is the earnest advice of Senator Wagner of New York, who pointed out that since the new law is to be in operation within a week or two all courts should take judicial notice and "come to the rescue of the mortgagor."

Branch offices are to be set up across the country to consider applications for aid from hard-pressed home owners.

HOMESTEAD TAX CASE ENDS IN KISS

Mrs. Cavanaugh Plants Loud 'Smack' on Louis Little's Cheek

A loud kiss, delivered by the comely "first lady" of Homestead, Mrs. John Cavanaugh, on the cheek of one of the defense counsel, Louis Little, brought to a close the Homestead tax assessment cases in Criminal Court.

Judge W. Heber Dithrich directed the jury to return verdicts of not guilty against Burgess John Cavanaugh, Charles J. McBride, former secretary of the Tax Revision Board, and Subordinate Assessor William Dee, late yesterday.

The jury today placed all costs on the county.

A few minutes before the case closed, Assistant County Solicitor Ralph Frank, who had been assisting Assistant District Attorney Earl T. Adair in the prosecution, withdrew from the case, after stating to the court:

"I will not participate in the prosecution of a case in which the district attorney's employees openly work for the acquittal of the defendants."

Frank referred to the action of two county detectives, Michael Ford and Peter P. Connors, appearing as character witnesses for the defendants. He said he had no quarrel with the manner in which Adair had tried the case.

Fifty-two character witnesses were sworn in a body as character witnesses, the detectives included. Only half a dozen testified, McDermott being the last. Connors did not speak.

it impossible for the state to borrow money or incur indebtedness. He requested that the federal government finance the state projects in their entirety with the understanding that 70 per cent of the money be repaid in biennial installments.

The recovery act permits the federal government to assume 30 per cent of the cost of labor and materials on all projects. The Governor wrote:

"I pledge myself to request our Legislature at its next regular session and the two regular sessions thereafter to provide for the repayment to the federal government in three biennial instalments, beginning during the biennium 1935-37, of the difference between the total cost of these projects and 30 per cent of the cost of labor and materials."

While a group of Western Pennsylvania coal operators were working in this city on a code of fair business practices, the National Coal Association, meeting at Chicago, adopted a similar plan. The coal plans temporarily passed up the problem of the al-important labor question because of sharp differences of opinion on this question.

A code for the oil industry has been completed at another conference in Chicago.

Leaders in the steel industry declared that their plan will be ready in about a week.

VOTE OFFICIAL INDICTED

That the Federal grand jury conducting the probe of election fraud charges is considering reports of alleged threats against voters in the Fourth ward, was indicated yesterday when it returned an indictment against Albert Diulius, judge of the election board in the Tenth district.

It also returned another indictment against six persons, five of them election officials in the Sixth district of the Third ward, making 18 indictments in two days.

Those named in the latter indictment were Anthony Sibilia, judge of the board; Jack Frankel and Henry Silverstein, inspectors; Davey Slutzky and Harry Kalson, clerks, and Harry Kart. They are charged with altering ballots and conspiring to violate rights of voters.

Diulius was charged with threatening James Hanley if he testified before the grand jury. The ballots in Diulius' district were said to have mysteriously disappeared.

The Bank Depository Ordinances, which were passed upon

It is not my intention or desire to criticize or condemn any other City official but it is unfair and unjust to attempt

Pinochle Players Slain In Feud Shooting

CHICAGO, June 17.—(AP.)—One of three pinochle players was slain and three other persons were wounded when three gunmen strode boldly into their midst outside a local factory and sprayed them with 18 bullets.

The man who fell mortally wounded yesterday, as the gunmen dashed for their waiting automobile and escaped, was Joe Petitti. As a possible motive for the killing police looked back to the kidnaping five years ago of Billy Ranieri, then 10 years old, son of a wealthy contractor.

Since the boy's return unharmed Joe's brother, Angelo, has been sentenced to 25 years in prison as the abductor and three men have been slain. One of them was Joe's brother, Fred; another was his father-in-law, Thomas Tiritilli. The other was Ole Scully, the boy's uncle.

fatally wounded and the escaped convict dead.

FIVE KILLED

Those killed were:

Frank Nash, ex-convict.

Raymond J. Caffrey, U. S. Department of Justice.

Chief of Police Ott Reed, of McAlester, Okla.

Frank Hermanson, Kansas City detective.

"Red" Grooms, Kansas City detective.

Another local Department of Justice operative, A. E. Vetterli, was wounded in the gun battle and rushed to a hospital.

F. F. Lackey, another local Department of Justice operative, was wounded and rushed to a nearby hospital. The extent of his injuries have not been ascertained.

Nash, suspected by Department of Justice investigators of being one of the plotters of the prison break two years ago in which Warden White was kidnaped, had been arrested near McAlester, Okla.

CHAINED TO SLEUTH

He was handcuffed and chained to Operative Caffrey. With them was the McAlester chief of police, Ott Reed.

They were met at the Union Station by Detectives Hermanson and Grooms and by Department of Justice Operatives Lackey and Vetterli.

Caffrey and his prisoner had left their train and made their way up through the waiting room in the spacious Union Depot. They had been joined by the local officers and were approaching the main corridor when accosted by the gang of gunmen.

The gunmen advanced to meet them and demanded that the prisoner be turned over to them. Caffrey whipped his revolver from his hip and answered them with a blaze of bullets.

Response of the gunmen was immediate and in kind. While the screams of horror-tricken women and children reverberated through the tall corridors of the Union Station, they were drowned out by the staccato belching of a dozen revolvers.

When the smoke of battle had cleared away, five men were dead and two others wounded.

Three Arrested, One Slain in Kidnaping

VIENNA, June 17.—(INS.)—Three men were under arrest here today, charged with attempting to kidnap the son of Moritz Pollack, wealthy Vienna manufacturer.

Police prevented the kidnaping, killing one of the alleged abductors.

175 Recruits Praised After Day Spent Preparing Camp

Pitching tents, making bunks and hay mattresses, and getting acquainted with tent mates, occupied the first day in camp for the 175 men in the new reforestation camp in North Park.

The recruits, under the supervision of Capt. Lewis A. Witney and Lieut. Elliott Watkins, of Fort George G. Meade, Maryland, are to spend three months in the camp. Capt. Watkins said:

"They are a good bunch of men. They are obedient and willing, and will develop into a good company."

The men rise at 6 o'clock in the morning. Breakfast is served at 6:45, and work begins between 7 and 7:30. Lunch is served at noon, and then the men work until 5 o'clock, when dinner is served. Their evenings are free.

Fresh vegetables are served every day. Milk is served about twice a week. The menu for last night's dinner was tuna fish, macaroni, beans and vegetables.

Capt. Witney said that the actual work of reforestation will not start for a few days. Meanwhile the captain plans to contact various groups in the city and ask for entertainment for his men.

ARCTIC HOLDS MATTERN FATE

NOME, Alaska, June 17.—(AP.)—The mysterious silence of the Arctic closed in today on "Smiling" Jimmy Mattern, daring Texas aviator who hopped off Wednesday from Khabarovsk, Siberia, on the dangerous 2,400-mile flight to Nome, Alaska.

Despite growing fears that he may have met with an accident, veteran Nome aviators asserted there was a good chance that he may have landed safely on some uninhabited Aleutian island, as did Allen and Moyle on a similar flight several years ago, or else turned back to some tiny Siberian camp that was without communications with the outside world.

Although there has been occasional fog, heavy frosts, and snarling cross winds, the weather along Mattern's route has not been unusually severe during the past few days.

Mattern's available gas supply was estimated to have been exhausted more than 30 hours ago.

SHERIFF FREED BY FLOYD

BOLIVAR, Mo., June 10.—(INS.)—Sheriff Jack Killingsworth, of Polk County, kidnaped by Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, notorious desperado, returned here early today after a wild 500-mile ride at the point of a machine gun.

Killingsworth said that Floyd and an accomplice, Adam Richetti, threatened him with death if he disclosed details of the abduction. The Sheriff was reluctant to describe his abduction.

MAUG ESCAPE HERO SEIZES 2

Radio Patrolman "Barth" Flaherty, who figured in the capture of Freddie Prince and Theodore Geisler, companions of John Maug and Edward Turpac in their escape from Western Penitentiary, today aided in the capture of two alleged burglar suspects.

Summoned to 2828 Preble avenue to a store operated by Isadore Baskin, police said they detected William Ivory, 25, of 760 Reedsdale street, and Samuel Hesser, 27, of 2906 Preble avenue, both Negroes, coming from the rear.

Police said they found two iron bars and a brick in the possession of the two men. A rear cellar door had been forced open, they said.

BOYD TO QUIZ MAUG ON AID

Inspector of Detectives Frank R. Boyd wants to question John Maugh and Edward Turpac about aid they are believed to have received following their break from Western Penitentiary, he said today.

The trial of Walter Swisher, of Hays, indicated on a charge of aiding the two "lifers" by driving them to a hideout in Balwin Township, is schedulel for next week.

If Maug and Turpac are not returned to Pittsburgh today, Boyd said he would send Detectives Frank Morgan and Robert Marshall to Cleveland to interview the two convicts.

wood detectives who surprised them as they were about to hold up the Western Union telegraph office in Lakewood.

However, the officers said last night they were obligated to turn the reward money over to their police pension fund in accordance with an agreement.

Maug and Turpac were described in circulars as desperate men who would shoot it out to avoid arrest, but they didn't shoot it out. Of the arrest, Detective Potts said:

"It was an easy pinch. I thought they were supposed to be tough. They each had a gun, but neither of them attempted to use it."

"WHERE'S THE MAYOR?"

Maug and Turpac later explained they would have shot it out had not the detectives had "the drop on them." They were grinning when they came in the room. Maug's grin was a sheepish one. Turpac was talkative. He said:

"Well, well, well, every one's here but Mayor Kline. Where's the Mayor?"

He turned to Murren:

"Hello George. You didn't come up in that crate you tried to chase us in that night at the stone quarry in West Homestead, did you? I hope you didn't or we'll never get back home."

He laughed loudly as he reviewed the circumstances under which he and Maug escaped from the detectives May 5 in a volley of bullets. He continued:

"I have to laugh every time I think of that car you were chasing us in. I heard that can rattling 20 minutes before you came. Why, I could have pushed the car I was in, and then you couldn't even get close to me."

Detective John Burke, who was at the quarry when the fugitives escaped, hastily added:

"Well, we put a lot of lead into that car of yours. Somebody must have been shot.

And Maug replied:

"I got shot. Right on top of the head. It was a glancing bullet, and it was not very bad."

SHOWS BULLET SCAR

He removed his hat to show the scar.

Murren asked if his hands had healed. Murren believed them to be burned from the slide down the rope during their escape from the penitentiary.

Maug replied:

"My hands didn't get burned. The only guy that got burned was that mug Geisler. He was so excited he forgot how to slide down a rope. I came down hand over hand."

He said the rope they used to get over the prison wall was 90 feet long. He added:

"We made the rope. No, we didn't know how strong it was. How did we find out? Well, we made Eddie Prince go down first. He was the heaviest, you know, and we figured if he got down all right, the rest of us could."

Both men were neatly dressed. Asked about the clothes, Maug said:

"We had to get them. You know we couldn't go anywhere in overalls."

And Here's Mr. Turpac

CAPTURED EDWARD TURPAC . . . . HE SENT A "MOO-COW"

Convict Turpac, lieutenant and pal long at large with Killer John Maug, pictured after his capture in Cleveland as the two revealed that while they were skipping 'round-and-about Pittsburgh in leading police a long and merry chase they sent City Detectives Morgan and Son one of "those things that makes a mooing sound when you pick it up." thing. We went without supper two or three times before that just to see if they would come in to check us, but they never did. If they checked us on the night of the break, they must have been fooled by the dummies, because we didn't hear any alarm.

When it was good and dark, we put our ladder together on the roof of the chapel. The officers are on the front of this building. We threw the rope over the front and dropped 80 feet to the ground.

It was pretty light, and there was a guard in the tower, but he didn't see us. I expected to get plugged any minute, but I wasn't scared. We climbed a six-foot iron fence and were free. No one noticed us, because our dark trousers didn't give us away. We called a taxi and drove to the city. Turpac and I left the other two then and hid out that night.

But after that we didn't stay under cover long. We pulled a couple of jobs and went around without much trouble.

It was two weeks after the break that we had our scrap. Somebody gave the county the tip that we were going to pull a job in Homestead that night, and the county gang came out full force in a car.

They saw us on a hill and stopped 30 feet ahead of us. I was driving. We had a brand new Buick. I turned the buggy around, and it was just then that the fireworks started.

They said afterwards, they chased us for I don't know how long, but we gave them the crooked foot in less than three blocks. The back end of our car looked like a sieve. I've always wondered what the fellow said when he got it back. We had to abandon the bus.

The next four days we hid out in the South Side. We could see the cops across the river looking everywhere for us. On the fourth night they were right around our building. We could have reached out and touched them. We kept 2-hour watches, and there was always someone acting as lookout. The reason we didn't scram out of town right away was because I got creased in the back of the head by a bullet in the scrap with the county.

THUGS DEMAND $100,000 FOR ST. PAUL MAN

Victim, Life in Peril, Begs Friends to Pay Ransom

International News Service.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 17.—William Hamm, Jr., 39-year-old millionaire brewer and scion of one of St. Paul's oldest families, was being held today by kidnapers who have threatened to kill their captive unless $100,000 ransom is paid.

Warning that they are dealing with a veteran kidnaping gang of the Northwest was served on authorities when a taxicab driver who delivered the ransom note identified Verne Sankey as the man who engaged him for the mission.

Sankey is wanted for the abduction here of Haskell Bohn, son of a wealthy manufacturer, as well as the sensational kidnaping of Charles Boettcher II, Denver millionaire, several months ago.

Police withheld news of the abduction, which occurred Thursday, until late last night in the hope of trapping the kidnapers. Efforts to contact the gang had proved futile, however.

WHISKED AWAY

Although police were without definite information as to where Hamm was seized, it is believed that he fell into the hands of the kidnapers while walking from his office to the Hamm residence.

A son of the late William Hamm, St. Paul capitalist, the abduction victim is president and treasurer of the Theodore Hamm Brewing Company of St. Paul. He likewise directs extensive realty properties and is prominent in St. Paul social and industrial circles.

A telephone call to William Dunn, business associate of Hamm, first disclosed the kidnaping. A man's voice said over the telephone:

"We have just kidnaped Mr. Hamm. You will hear from us later."

LIFE THREATENED

This was followed by a note which Dunn received yesterday afternoon. The message stated that Hamm was being held for $100,000 ransom and added:

"He will be killed if the cash isn't paid over."

Hamm had added a signed postscript to the note, begging his associates to pay the ransom immediately. Detailed instructions were given for payment of the ransom.

Knowing that the millionaire's life would be endangered by a vigorous hunt for the gang, police were proceeding cautiously with the investigation, allowing the victim's associates to deal directly with the kidnappers to effect Hamm's release.

Many to Serve Contest Dinners on Sunday

From all indications it seems that the housewives of Pittsburgh and vicinity are going to do a lot of experimenting with their Sunday dinners tomorrow. Hundreds of realy attractive dinner menus have already been sent in for judging in the first week's Prudence Penny Prize Dinner, Menu Contest in which the Sun-Telegraph will award $100 in cash prizes. It is safe to assume that many of these menus will get a tryout tomorrow by the housewives who arranged them for the contest.

Here is the contest question: "Can four persons be served a well-balanced, appetizing dinner menu at a cost not to exceed $1.50?"

The concensus seems to be overwhelmingly in the affirmative. The retail prices of foodstuffs is at an unusually low level today and it seems that careful, practical "shopping" easily furnishes an answer to the problem in the contest.

Dinner Menu Contest No. 1 closes tonight. Entries for this week should be sent in before next Tuesday. It is expected that the names of the winners will be announced Friday.

Contest No. 2 begins tomorrow. It is based on identically the same question and entries for the second week's $100 in awards must be submitted before midnight Tuesday, June 27. All entries for the second contest must have written on the outside of the envelope "Contest No. 2." Entries submitted for Contest No. 1 will not be considered in the second week's contest unless re-submitted.

There is an entry blank and complete rules in today's Sun-Telegraph. If you want additional blanks get them free at any one of these leading stores:—McCann's, Donahoe's, Krogers, Triangle, Clover Farm Stores or Butler's. Housewives may submit as many entries as they wish.

Maug's 'Ex-Moll' Weds As Police Nab Him

While John Maug, mob leader and killer, was being speeded back to a cell in Western Penitentiary today, his former "moll" Gladys Jackson, now Mrs. George Walker, was nearing Chicago on a honeymoon.

As she promised to "love, honor and obey," Maug, and his pal, Edward Turpac, were being taken into custody as they attempted to holdup a Western Union telegraph office in Lakewood, O.

Mrs. Walker is on a three-year parole, following conviction for her part in the activities of the Maug gang.

Inspector of Detectives Frank R. Boyd today said the wedding had been kept secret from all but a few friends. The wedding, following the capture by a matter of minutes, was "mere coincidence," according to Inspector Boyd. He added:

"She is trying to do the right thing and go straight. I think we ought to give her a break."

The bride is 22 and a blonde.

The bridegroom resides at 1225 Howard street, North Side.

FATHERS TO BE HONORED IN CHURCHES TOMORROW

SPECIAL TALKS WILL BE GIVEN BY PASTORS

Fathers in Pittsburgh and throughout the nation will be honored tomorrow in homes and churches with appropriate ceremonies. For the last 24 years the third Sunday in June has been designated as Father's Day, and has been observed by special services in the churches and by the bestowal of gifts from wives and children in the homes.

It has become customary to wear a rose on Father's Day, just as it has to wear a carnation on Mother's Day. A red rose is worn if the wearer's father is living, and a white rose if he is dead.

The day was first observed in Spokane, Wash., in June 1909 at the suggestion of Mrs. John B. Dodd, artist and club woman. The observance attracted nation-wide attention and the custom has spread to all parts of the country. Pittsburgh was one of the first cities to adopt the observance.

The Rev. Frank J. Bryson will speak on "Father" in the Second Presbyterian Church, Arch street, at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Father's Day messages will be brought by three fathers in the Third Primitive Methodist Church, Homestead street, Swissvale, at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Father's Day services will be held in the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, Brownsville road, Carrick, at 10:45 a. m. tomorrow, and in the Third Presbyterian Church, South Negley avenue, at 8 p. m.

A Father's Day program will be given in the chapel of each of the buildings of the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor tomorrow. Music and "Father" songs will be featured.

TWO BROTHERS TO SAY MASS

Mrs. Mary Madden, 58, widowed mother of eight children, will experience the proudest day of her life tomorrow when two of her sons say their first mass together in St. Mary of the Mount Church, Mt. Washington.

The Rev. Thomas E. Madden, 25, who was ordained in Rome, Italy, last October, returned to New York June 7, to be present at the ordination of his brother, the Rev. Alan J. Madden, at the Immaculate Conception Shrine in Washington, Tuesday. Father Thomas Madden has been a student at the American College in Rome for the past six years.

The two brothers will celebrate their first solemn high mass tomorrow morning and be entertained at a reception at the home of their mother, 436 Oneida street, Mt. Washington, tomorrow afternoon.

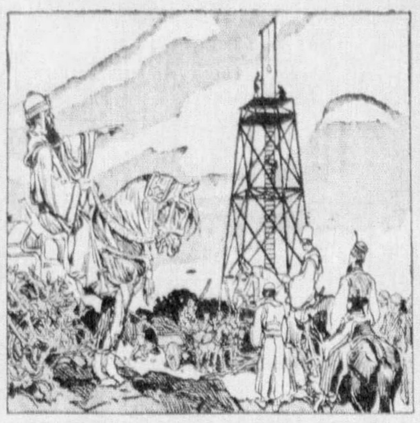
Father Thomas Madden will then take up his duties in the Altoona diocese and Father Alan Madden will resume his studies at the University in Washington.

North Avenue Choir To Present Program

The choir of the North Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church will give a musical program tomorrow evening. Elsie Breese Mitchell, soprano soloist, will direct the choir of 35 voices, with Edna M. Sharpe at the organ.

The Story of Queen Esther -:- CHAPTER VIII -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

Haman, chief captain of the King, pleased by Queen Esther's invitation to the banquet, boasted to his family that he would soon have his revenge on his enemy Mordecai, who was a Jew.



Little knowing that Mordecai was Esther's uncle, Haman then ordered a tall gallows built on which he planned to hang Mordecai on the day the death edict against the Jews was carried out.

Meantime King Xerxes came upon the record of how Mordecai saved him from the schemers, Bignath and Teresh, and decided to honor Mordecai. "How shall I honor a man who pleases me?" he asked Haman.

Thinking he, himself, was meant, Haman suggested that the man be paraded before the public on the King's horse. Then, much to his chagrin, Haman was ordered to do exactly this to Mordecai.

SWISS YODELERS -:- Singers Broadcast Across Ocean -:- ON AIR TONIGHT

Radio Brings Miniature Pinafore

The oh-le-ay-he-whos of the winners of the largest yodelers festival ever held resound from coast-to-coast in this country tonight at 6 when NBC-WCAE stages a transatlantic pickup from Interlaken, Switzerland.

The winning club, the pick of 150 such yodelling groups, is augmented for the performance by a real peasant orchestra . . .

In addition, tuners-in'll hear Miss Gretli Wenger, who, simultaneously with her vocal gyrations, plays the "hand harmonica"—a setup of glasses partially filled with water.

The King's Navy

"Pinafore," Gilbert and Sullivan's musical story of the distressing case of a navy officer who so far forgot himself as to use a naughty word in full hearing of his shocked crew, is done in miniature via NBC-KDKA at 9.

No less than 25 foremost United States institutions of higher learning are represented etherically on WCAE at 10 when B. A. Rolfe plays a full hour of college songs in response to hundreds of fan notes from students in all parts of the country.

Three budding Chautauqua Opera stars—Josephine Antoine, Atwater Kent national auditions winner three years ago; Joan Peebles, former member of the New York Opera Company, and Roderic Cross, basso—are billed musically on KDKA at 4:30.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

Everyone isn't going to be married in June; aren't you glad? At least one girl has decided on a July wedding date. So we shall have something to anticipate next month, too.

She's Lorraine Taylor, the Clyde C. Taylors' daughter, who has named July 10 as her wedding date. She'll marry George S. Fichtel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Fichtel.

And here's some good news for those who like picturesque weddings. She'll be married at beautiful Longue Vue Country Club with the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr as the officiant. A small reception will follow the ceremony.

The Henry G. Blackwells, of Greenwood, Yardley, Pa., announce the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Ulric Dahlgren, Jr., to T. Stockton Gaines, one of Pittsburgh's eligible bachelors.

Announce Betrothal

Mr. Gaines is the son of former Congressman and Mrs. Joseph H. Gaines, of Charlestown, W. Va. He's a graduate of Princeton, class of 1923, and a member of the Quadrangle Club and the Princeton Club of New York.

* * *

Add to your calendar of weddings that of Miss Sarah Rose Haddock, daughter of the William S Haddocks, of Dormont, who will marry George Pearson Rhodes, Jr., son of the George Pearson Rhodeses, of Wilkins avenue, June 29.

The ceremony will take place at 5:30 o'clock in the Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church with the Rev. Dr. Edwin J. Van Etten officiating.

Miss Anne Semple entertained yesterday at the Semple home in honor of her mother, Mrs. Frank Semple, who was celebrating her ninetieth birthday.

And each guest brought a single rose for Mrs. Semple.

Miss Martha Lou Clark Marries Montrose Man

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Clark, of Jackson street, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Martha Lou Clark, to Paul Gardner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Gardner, of Montrose, which took place in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on October 8. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner are at home in 19 Cherry street, Montrose.

The Rev. Dr. and Mrs. E. R. Davidson, of West Prospect avenue, Ingram, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Virginia Davidson, to the Rev. John Templeton Brownlee. The Rev. Brownlee is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brownlee, of Washington, Pa.

Miss Davidson is a graduate of Westminster College, and her fiance was graduated from Washington and Jefferson College and from the Pittsburgh-Xenia Theological Seminary.

B. P. W. Delegates to Hear Progress of 10-Year Plan

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Business and professional women from all over the country will hear reports of the progress made by B. P. W. clubs in the National Federation's 10-year objective when the nation's "career women" meet for their biennial convention in Chicago July 9 to 15. For the last two years the federation has been conducting a correlated program of economic study and community betterment through its 1,350 clubs.

The scope of activities is vastly interesting, for these have ranged from academic courses in economics, conducted by university professors and open to all the adults in the community, to elaborate programs of community betterment.

A Des Moines, Iowa, club has made an intensive study of the local tax dollar to determine whether education, social welfare and similar projects were receiving an adequate appropriation. A series of lectures by University of Cincinnati professors was sponsored by a Cincinnati club and a Raleigh, N. C., club sponsored a series of radio lectures on economics.

A canning campaign to provide a winter's supply of food for undernourished children, school lunches, a baby clinic, establishing and maintaining recreation centers and municipal playgrounds have been among the welfare projects undertaken by clubs here and there all over the country—reports from which will add their quota of interest to the coming biennial.

Pittsburghers to Attend Sodalities Convention

Miss Anna A. Egan is in charge of the Pittsburgh delegation leaving tonight for the national convention of Young Ladies' Sodalities of the Blessed Virgin which opens in St. Louis tomorrow.

Miss Helen P. Busse Weds Leland M. Weed

Miss Helen P. Busse, of Crafton Heights, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Busse, became the bride of Leland M. Weed, son of Mrs. Millie Weed, of Warren, O., on Monday. Officiating was the Rev. Roy Shear, of the Crafton Heights United Presbyterian Church. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

After a motor trip to Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Weed will be at home in Elm road, Warren, O., about June 20.

Miss Anastasia Flocos Weds Zachary K. Paul

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Flocos announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Anastasia Flocos, to Zachary K. Paul, which was solmenized on Thursday in the Flocos home in West street, Wilkinsburg, at 8:30 o'clock. Officiating was the Rev. Joachim Malachias. The bride was unattended and Harry C. Bires was best man.

There was a reception for the families after which Mr. and Mrs. Paul left for the East. They will be at home after July 1 in English Terrace, Fifth avenue.

Miss Myra Colborn Boor To Wed D. A. Fuller Jr.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Myra Colborn Boor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Boor, of Confluence, Pa., to Denton A. Fuller, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Denton A. Fuller, of Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Miss Boor

Miss Boor is a graduate of Pennsylvania College for Women, 1930, and her fiance of the Miami University, 1929.

Bernice Davidson, Ben Rubin Wed Tomorrow

The marriage of Miss Bernice Davidson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hill Davidson, of Center avenue, to Ben Rubin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Rubin, of New York, will take place tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Webster Hall Hotel. Officiating will be Rabbi A. M. Ashinsky. There will be a reception and dinner later.

Mrs. Irving Burn, sister of the bridegroom-elect, will be matron of honor and bridesmaids will be Miss Mildred Kaufman, Miss Beatrice Noven and Miss Dorothy Davidson. Irving Burn will serve as best man, and ushers will include Frank Engelman, Earl Kline and Edgar Davidson. Harriet Gusky, niece of the bride, will be flower girl and Marvin Gusky, her nephew, will be ringbearer.

Miss Davidson is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh and her fiance of New York University. They will attend the Century of Progress Exposition on their wedding trip.

Miss Vera Levison To Marry R. J. Drazen

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice H. Levison, of Station street, McDonald, Pa., announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Vera Levison, to Robert T. Drazen, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Drazen, of New Haven, Conn., at a recent party in their home for 40 guests. No wedding date has been announced.

Miss Levison was graduated from the Social Service department of Carnegie Tech, 1932, and her fiance is a recent graduate of the University of Pittsburgh. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Mu, of which he was president during his senior year.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Aronson, of Squirrel Hill avenue, entertained with a dinner in honor of Miss Levison and her fiance, and Dr. and Mrs. Sam Rosen entertained in their home in Darlington road, with a buffet luncheon for them.

FASHION SAYS CHAMOIS FOR COLD CLIMATE GOLF CLOTHES

CARLOADS and trainloads of the best people are moving northwards. Some of the best golf is played in the cool hills, where the morning air is still stimulatingly fresh. It's great sport—but it can be ruined by the wrong clothes. A good idea is to start out with a simple shirtmaker type of dress, short-sleeved and ample skirted. Top this with a chamois jacket that can be taken off when the sun grows blistering hot towards noon-day. You'll find that you need it again when you start back to the hotel or mountain lodge. Without much notice, a mountain day turns chilly after the sun has set.

PERFORATED chamois is smart—it's new. The particular point about it is that it incorporates the fashion for pin-dots and chamois with complete success. You see it made up both ways here. Plain and perforated. The girl on the sand-box wears a slip-on with simple round neck. The other, a plain surface, buttoned jacket. The chamois is soft, fine, and tailored with the same careful detail given to sheer fabrics.

* * *

BEHIND THEM a girl practices her shot, dressed for golf in a woolen knitted two-piece suit. Metal clips run down the front of the blouse, opening it all the way down to avoid wrecking curls while slipping it on. There's a wide ribbed band at the waist. Nothing could be more comfortable than the rangy skirt for long-legged strides across the course. The plaid is of dark brown and tan, with flitting touches of orange running through it. The whole thing looks hand-knit, though it's not.

WEAR THESE with a hat—or not—as the sun above dictates. For those who care for the idea, the chamois jackets have matching hats. Simple, casual and easy to pull on and off. You needn't worry about giving them plenty of wear and tear.

* * *

IF, THE next day, you plan a hike up the mountain side instead of golf, continue in the same clothes. Their free and easy cut makes them appropriate for climbing and their fashionable trimness is correct to stop for luncheon on the way up.

DOLLAR DECLINE NOT BEARISH FACTOR

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 17.—The idea that the lack of progressive depreciation of the dollar is bearish seems to me a superficial view.

Mr Rukeyser

Accordingly, the attempt to agree on the stabilization of the dollar, the pound, and the franc during the period of the World Economic Conference at London should not be regarded as of pivotal importance. However it is questionable whether it would be wise policy at this time for the United States to surrender any of its freedom of action in its battle against deflation.

Already the depreciation of the dollar up to this point has jective which the advocates of the present economic policy had in mind, namely, to reverse the deflationary process. Once this was accomplished, as it has been, it is assumed that the cumulative character of a recovery will gather momentum. The mere threat of inflation was influential in causing a sharp upturn in commodity prices.

OPPOSITION SEEN

Even if only the present levels are substantially maintained, much progress will have been made in bolstering up purchasing power.

The purpose of the new monetary policy was to get business off the dead center. It has already contributed substantially in that direction.

Accordingly, it does not seem necessary or desirable to keep applying the stimulus of further dollar depreciation endlessly. To take that course would be to follow the reckless inflationary record of post-war Germany and Austria.

Once the pump was primed, the new economic policy, which has been described as an attempt at "managed recovery," could give impetus to recovery without continuous further depreciation of the dollar.

Of course, if, as is commonly reported, the objective is a return to the 1926 price level, which would be a drastic movement, then perhaps after the temporary truce further weakness in the exchange market might be contemplated, but if the dollar gets much below recently prevailing levels, there will probably be increased opposition to the policy.

"NEW DEAL" CRUX

On account of the creditor position of the United States, with the balance of payments in our favor, it might be difficult to hold the dollar even down to current levels for a long period without reducing the gold content.

Although the threat of inflation quickened the upward surge, many believe that the country was ready for recovery anyway.

As Lionel D. Edie has pointed out, the crux of the London meeting is whether the United States will be able to interest other countries in paralleling our experiment in "new deal" controlled economics, or managed recovery. The central issue revolves around attempts to control price levels.

Until the recent upturn, business in the United States had fallen to an unbelievable low level. Some believe that the excessive decline, excessive in terms of the degree of depression in other countries, was ascribable to hide bound policies—to an unintelligent attempt to direct affairs in this vastly changed power age in accordance with mid-victorian economic theories. Release from such artificial restraints tended to set loose pent-up impulses for continued national growth.

STOCKS JUMP AFTER EARLY UNCERTAINTY

NEW YORK, June 17.—(AP.)—After milling about uncertainly in the early trading today, stock prices moved forward for gains of fractions to 2 points.

Rails were fairly firm while utilities improved slightly. Trading was at a moderate pace.

Bethlehem Steel, Continental Can and Union Pacific gained 2 points each while Chrysler, American Telephone and National Distillers were up around a point. Shares with lesser gains included General Motors, U. S. Steel, Du Pont, Sears Roebuck, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania and General Electric. American Can was steady while Case eased slightly.

The Presidential signature to bills giving him unprecedented peacetime control over the nation's economic life, interested the financial community less than dispatches from London regarding the currency negotiations.

Wall street gave an attentive ear to the report that the British viewpoint was swinging around to a more sympathetic consideration of the American monetary program which—as the administration has often pointed out—has as its major platform the raising of prices. Demand for at least temporary stabilization apparently fluctuates in accord with the gyrations of the foreign exchanges, and in the last few days has become well crystalized.

Industrial news continued favorable. Automobile production for the past week, as estimated by Cram, totaled 55,496, an increase of 2,213 over the preceding week, and within a few hundred units of the high for the year established on May 20.

Foreign exchanges were slightly weaker. Sterling opened at $4.07¼, a decline of half a cent, while French francs stood at 4.73 cents, an overnight decline of 2½ points.

FOX PLANS CUT IN CAPITAL

NEW YORK, June 17.—(AP.)—Plans of the Fox Film Corporation for a "write-down" of its capitalization, whereby one share of new stock will be exchanged for six of the old, are to be voted on by shareholders at the company's annual meeting next Tuesday.

The proposal involves the reduction of the corporation's class "A" shares from 4,900,000 to 404,276 and then increasing authorized new class "A" common to 2,800,000 shares, partly to provide for the exercise of stock purchase warrants and the conversion of debentures. Class "B" stock would be reduced from 100,000 shares to 16,650 on the same basis as the class "A."

Reorganization plans of the company followed by two months the withdrawal of action by stockholders to throw the concern into receivership. General Theaters Equipment, Inc., through ownership of 1,221,213 class "A" shares, controls the company.

CAR LOADINGS UP 56,312

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Loading of revenue freight cars during the week ended June 10 totaled 564,546 cars, an increase of 56,312 cars over the preceding week.

Total loadings for the June 10 week were the highest for any 1933 week to date and amounted to an increase of 12½ per cent above the corresponding 1932 period. In the preceding seven days this year the increase over the like 1932 period amounted to 13½ per cent. The betterment reported for the June 10 period marks the fifth consecutive week to register an increase over a year previous.

TAX APPROVAL HITS WHEAT

CHICAGO, June 17.—Wheat prices underwent a quick early drop today following official announcement of the Washington administration's $150,000,000 wheat processor tax and farmer owner plan.

Active selling was based largely on assumption that the plan would tend to bring United States terminal market prices for wheat down to a shipping basis under Liverpool.

Opening 3/8 to 1 cent lower, wheat afterward fell further. Corn started unchanged to 3/8 off, declined all around, and then scored gains.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Advice to a Hick

Go back to Keokuk and wed a local swain,
And live a calm, secluded life with minimum of pain.
Forget the city's twilight—its pagan avatars;
The buildings, each a heaven, with a million stars.

Put from your heart the image
Of night life's tinseled glamor,
And hark not to the rhythm
It whips with fevered hammer.

And don't recall, by any means,
Infrequent little parks
That dot the city—here and there—
Like bearded patriarchs.

Leave it all behind you—in memory's safe tomb;
The city is your lover—the village is your groom!
—Naomi Shaw.

Form of Criticism

The re-opening and closing of "Of Thee I Sing" revived another George S. Kaufman flipcrack. Shortly after the hit premiered, the author was viewing (with alarm) the poor performance of an actor in the cast—from the rear pews. He hastened out to send the careless player this telegram:

"Am watching you from the last row. Wish you were here!"

Izzy Elinsonism

Mayor O'Brien wanted to tax all persons who ride taxis and those who ride autos. Imagine all the revenue—if he could tax the New Yorkers who ride the Mayor!

Imagine

This actually happened on one of the sets in which Paul Lukas was working in a new flicker. In this particular scene Lukas was playing the part of a waiter. An extra girl whispered to a friend nearby:

"Isn't that Paul Lukas—playing the waiter?"

"Yes," she was told.

"What a shame," moaned the extra. "And only last year he was playing leads!"

Naturally!

The other sundown a columnist phoned Alexander Woollcott to check on the tip that the critic planned a holiday.

"I understand," said the caller, "that you're going to Charleston. What's in Charleston?"

"Charleston!" was the reply.

Siren

The alleged romance between Jack Oakie and Peggy Joyce, which ended soon after it started, aroused Bill Rankin, of Warner's, to jot this down.

Oakie's real sweetheart was Mary Lallande. They courted for two years. That is, until Peggy arived in Hollywood. Oakie, it appears, fell hard. He bought Peggy a camera for $10.

"Can you imagine that?" groaned the burned-up Mary. "For two whole years I got nothing out of him—and along comes this dame—and gold digs him-"

No Wonder

Oscar Levant, now in the movie sector far from the Broadway where his marital unhappiness started, was explaining to sympathizers why his wife divorced him.

"Besides incompatibility," said Oscar, "I had a feeling my wife hated me!"

We've Met Him

Richy Craig, Jr., describes a certain guy in this manner:

"He's the only feller I know who can make a 'Mickey Finn' sick!"

Heheheh

At one of the Hollywood parties they played games, when they weren't talking of cabbages and movie queens. The big idea of the game—was to see how many fallacies one could find in a story. One went like this:

"If a man owned a rooster and it jumped over into another man's yard and laid an egg, to whom does the egg belong? The man who owns the rooster or the man who owns the yard in which the egg was laid?"

There were several answers to this and finally the story offerer said:

"You're all wrong—because roosters don't lay eggs!"

"Oh, I don't know about that," said Craig. "Did you see Pathe's last statement?"

Quiteso, Quiteso

The honeymoon is over, says Lou Bonder, when he starts going to the Turkish bath.

Boys Will Be Bores

Dot Sauter, one of Babe Egan's "Redheads," who was injured in a crash the other day, found time to forward the one about the three little boys who were playing with wooden swords and guns in the court of a Paris building.

The little French boy said:

"Allez, allez, mon dieu, allez!"

The American, a toughie, barked:

"Aw, shut yer trap—or I'll run this sword smack inter yer kisser!"

The English lad, frightened stiff, said:

"By Jove! Let's hem him in from the centah!"

Sex Repeal

While waiting for traffic signals to change, the following chatter was eavesdropped. Two girls in the next car were babbling, and one babbled:

"You know, he wasted the longest part of an hour teaching me to appreciate Keats, Shelley and Byron."

Epitaph

Rennold Wolf, one of the better critics and flipcrackers of his day, they say, was always funny without being nasty. Nobody, it appears, ever knew him to offer a vicious crack. When the famous actress (whom he elevated from the chorus) achieved stardom and then snubbed him—passed on, Wolf couldn't stifle his bitterness.

He told intimates that the only word appropriate for her gravestone was—"Ingrate."

Merciless Truth

David Murray observes: Gold-diggers don't make a fool out of a man—they merely prove that he really is one!

In the Murray Mouth of Mae

When the Los Angeles papers broke the Prince Mdivani-Mae Murray divorce yarn the other day, she was quoted as saying.

"It always makes him wild when we walk down the street and people say: 'There goes Mae Murray—isn't she gorgeous?'"

Always belittlin'.

Overheard

"Did you hear Holtz on the air last night?"

"Yeah—but I'm all right, now."

Stanley Opens Another 'Gold Digger' Week

"Gold Diggers of 1933," new musical version of "The Gold Diggers," with Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler featured, began its second week in the Stanley yesterday. The story, filmed once before as "The Gold Diggers of Broadway," originally was a successful stage comedy. In its present form, it is rife with spectacular features and contains several songs that are proving popular with the public. Warren William, Joan Blondell, Guy Kibbee and Aline MacMahon have prominent parts in the picture.

Robinson Gets Napoleon Story

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, June 17.—One of Charlie Chaplin's cherished plans—to play Napoleon—will be carried out by Edward G. Robinson, the actor who became famous for his portrayal of gangster roles.

Mr. Robinson

This became assured when Jack Warner and Hal Wallis set several studio writers to work on a movie of the French emperor. Their idea is to feature the Little Corsican's romantic rather than his military exploits—to trace the influence of various women on his career.

What will interest Hollywood even more is the fact that this studio, noted for starting recent film trends, is committing itself to a costume picture. For several years now, producers have shied at the very words.

Rumor-hounds will tell you that Warners got the courage after they saw George Arliss' "Voltaire." Here, you are assured, is the finest thing the English actor has done.

When Courtenay Terrett came over to write for Darryl Zanuck, he expressed the hope that the company would not treat its authors like Siberial exiles. The next noon, he rushed up to Zanuck on the lot:

"You certainly do know how to treat a writer!" he exulted. "All day long my phone has been ringing and girls I don't know have been giving me their numbers."

"Well, don't get excited," Zanuck said. "We were so crowded I had to put you in an annex to the casting office."

The appearance of Garbo at a sneak preview of "Song of Songs" went unsuspected by a Pasadena audience, which surely would have mobbed her. The phantom Swede came in on the arm of Rouben Mamoulian, slipped into an aisle seat in the back row and made a dash for it just before the picture broke. I understand one Pasadena scribe got wind that she was in the audience, but missed her. He and the man in the auto park were among the very few who knew she was there.

Johnny Weissmuller tells me everything is all right between him and Lupe Velez. The two of them, Lupe in a white dress with a yellow cape, were dancing in the Cocoanut Grove the evening after her return. . . . It's to be a vacation for Clark Gable. Where he goes depends upon the results of the general physical examination he has been taking for the past week. . . . They'll be calling Dorothy Burgess and Winslow Felix steadies before long.

More than a touch of irony in the experience of Frank McGrath, double for Warner Baxter and for many months a Hollywood stuntman. In his time, McGrath has hopped speeding trains and jumped off 125-foot cliffs into the ocean. The other day he stepped out of a parked automobile to pick up his hat and broke an ankle. . . .

Add to the cinema's nautical elite Mrs. Roy Del Ruth, who has just purchased a 43-foot cruiser.

Silverplating Gold Standard, Congress Task

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The men-of-all-work leave Congress for a six month's convalesence. Here are some of the jobs they did:

Vulcanized banks, planted trees and dedicated the legal bungstarter.

Silver-plated the gold standard, guaranteed deposits, glorified gasoline, harpooned the loan shark, federalized the railroads, nationalized the pretzel and subsidized the plow.

Went into the power business, taxed everything but watermelon seeds and lightning rods, cleaned out Wall street cellars, but did no whitewashing.

Appropriated over five billion dollars and raised the birth rate of baby bonds, started largest public construction program of all time, learned to shave themselves because it is dangerous to nod yes in the barber chair, supervised trade agreements, fixed prices and franked their laundry as usual.

Investigated stocks, questioned everybody and answered no one. Compelled the seller to beware, the buyer to have care and the customer's man to take air.

After all that work it will be a relief to change a tire with nothing but a button nook and a wild desire to succeed.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

President Roosevelt again talks to the nation in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. In a statement made at the White House the Chief Executive explains his stand concerning the war debts. He emphasizes that the acceptance of a partial payment on the interest due is to be considered "as an acknowledgment of the debt pending final settlement." Continuing, he says:

"I want to make it clear that the Economic Conference now being held in London does not include in its program any consireation of the debts owed by various governments to the United States."

President Roosevelt is also seen and heard as he is given the degree of doctor of laws at the Catholic University, in Washington, conferred by Archbishop Curley. At the conclusion of the ceremony the Chief Executive is given a vociferous reception by the audience.

Colorful pictures show the graduation of 346 cadets at West Point, with Secretary of War Dern handing out the diplomas. The ceremony is described by the Globe Trotter.

Jack Sharkey, champion heavyweight, is seen training at Orangeburg, New York for his Milk Fund fight with Primo Carnera. In addition he sings a song. There are also pictures of Carnera who seems, too, to be in good shape.

An unusual marriage ceremony is performed at the World's Fair in Chicago when Harry Fish and Mariska Summers, members of the Lilliputian Village, are wed. All of the attendants also are midgets.

Stage Employes Show In Stanley Sunday

A program to include a feature picture and other films, as well as eight acts of professional vaudeville, will be given Sunday evening in the Stanley, for the benefit of the personal aid fund of local stage employes, which has been drained through help to the unemployed. The feature picture will be "After the Ball," with a cast headed by Esther Ralston and Basil Rathbone.

Hawkins and Virginians Kennywood Feature

Jess Hawkins and his Virginians will play tonight's dance music and tomorrow's free concerts at Kennywood Park. Hawkins, himself and "Red" Evans, female impersonator, comedians of the Virginians, will do solos and duets on both occasions. The Virginians, radio feature from the West, will play for the dancing afternoons and evenings next week.

In Which the Customers Do the Work

"I BELIEVE it or not, Mark," writes Marc Clements, "it actually happened to a friend of mine only a short time ago. Tom's my friend's name, and Mary is the tag of the girl with whom he traveled about every now and then. She wasn't his steady, you understand. She was just a girl that—well, just a girl with whom he traveled around now and then. (Editor's note: We get you, Mr. Clements.)

"At any rate, Mary moved to another apartment a few weeks ago and had a little trouble getting a phone installed. Accordingly, when leaving Tom one night, she offered a little suggestion.

"'In case you want to reach me at any time, Tom,' she said, 'all you have to do is to call me at Mogg's grocery store on the corner. The man is very nice in there, and he's only too glad to get me to the phone if anyone calls.

"'I know it's a nuisance, but it won't be for long. So don't forget, Tom. If you want me, get me through the grocery store.'

"Now it so happened that Tom wanted to take her out a few nights later. He thought and thought, but he couldn't remember the name of the grocery store that Mary had mentioned. So he finally picked up the phone and spoke to information.

"'Look, girlie,' he said, 'there's a grocery store I want to reach and I've forgotten the name. I haven't the exact address, either, but I do know the location. Do you think you can help me out?'

"The young lady said she thought she could. And she did, too, by golly. She gave Tom a number to call, and said that was probably the spot about which he was talking. Tom phoned the number.

"'Hello,' said Tom when a voice answered. 'I wonder if I could trouble you to get Miss Mary Smith for me.'

"'No trouble at all," replied the voice. 'What is the address please?'

"Tom was a bit puzzled.

"'I don't know the exact address,' he said, 'but it's right across the street from you. You know her, don't you?'

"'Perhaps,' returned the voice, 'I am not certain at the moment. But if you will leave us the young lady's name and description, we will be happy to take care of the matter for you.'

"This was too much for Tom.

"'Listen,' he cried, 'am I being kidded, or something? What matter are you going to take care of? I want to speak to Miss Mary Smith. Isn't this the grocery on the corner?'

"The other voice seemed slightly surprised.

"'Oh, no, sir,' it returned. 'You have the wrong number. This is the undertaking parlor on the other corner!" . . .

HERE'S a legal yarn that I think is worth the spinning," writes Leonard Lyons, who always tells an excellent story. "It concerns an eminent psychiatrist, whose zealous experimentations regarding the human mind had made him one of the most noted in his field.

"He had evolved a peculiar theory. If you wanted to believe him, almost every member of the human race had a streak of insanity, in one form or another. Mankind, he insisted, had not yet reached the peak of mental perfection. Only through certain ministrations and labors that he was conducting, could civilization be saved.

"Medical journals published his theses. He was honored by the medical associations. He was called in to testify as a sanity expert at some of the most famous murder trials—and his opinions were invariably accepted. When it came to matters pertaining to the human mind, there was no doubting his great capabilities.

"Recently, someone brought suit against him, alleging breach of contract. His attorney, after examining the complaint in the action, consulted his client. And after that consultation, his attorney interposed one of the rarest defenses ever entered in civil suits.

"The answer admitted the making of the contract, and admitted that the sanity expert had breached it. But it alleged that the famous psychiatrist could not be held legally responsible for its acts.

"Why, do you ask? Because he's insane!"...

"DON'T know whether you've heard it before," writes Frank Plunkett, of Albany, "but after reading some of your columns, I don't figure that it makes much difference. So here we go:

"An English actor was always complaining of his terrible luck. To hear him tell it, his entire life had been nothing but a series of misfortunes. Whenever the opportunity presented itself, this actor would unfold his tale of woe.

"On the night we discover him, we find him in his usual state—or perhaps just a little bit worse. He had just been fired from the troupe, and was completing his last few days with the organization. Two days before he had been given his notice, his wife had run away with another actor. And, to make things a bit more cheerful, he was stone broke.

"He strode into his dressing room, his head in his hands.

"'Ah,' he murmured after the fashion of a prize ham. 'Woe is me! Nothing but ill luck has been heaped upon my bowed head.'

"The actor who shared his dressing room looked up with a smile.

"'Cheer up, my friend,' he murmured, 'the worst is yet to come.'

"The melancholy one struck a Napoleonic attitude and glared at his dressing room partner.

"'You know not what you say,' he stormed. 'It can't be any worse than it is. I have no money. My wife, the wretch, has left me for another. I have been fired. And——'

"Interrupting himself, he glanced out the window. Turning swiftly to the other actor, he pointed to the window with a dramatic gesture.

"'And there's something else, by heaven!" he concluded. 'Now it looks like rain!'" . . .

Real Thrills And Laughs In Davis

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Two people do superfine acting in "Emergency Call," the thrilling drama of hospital life and municipal graft which ought to be the major attraction in the Davis and Sheridan this week, though "Ann Carver's Profession" appears to be considered the more important. Wynne Gibson and William Gargan are the two players—she as a nurse, he as an ambulance driver — whose superfine acting makes this picture worth while.

Mr. Seibel

It is melodrama with some good comedy, but it is also a picture of racketeering in its worst phase, showing how hospitals even are not free from the slimy trail of political gangsters. Bill Boyd is a young interne who learns this from bitter experience, and he does honest acting as the doctor—but Wynne Gibson and William Gargan are so rare that they walk away with the picture.

"Emergency Call" is very well worth seeing.

"Ann Carver's Profession" has the charming Fay Wray as a lady attorney, who makes such a hit in her profession that she neglects her husband. This is a new angle, for usually it's the wife that is neglected. The husband in this case is an architect, who becomes a crooner in a night club when he feels that Fay loves Blackstone more than him. When the vamp who teaches him to drink is strangled by her own necklace, the wife uses her legal knowledge to save the husband, and then the picture ends with the venerable pun about "a little sun and air."

But "Ann Carver's Profession" also is worth seeing. Two good films at the Davis and Sheridan Square is really good news.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., June 17.—Have seen three brand new pictures. There is an epidemic of every female in every new picture now to try and act like May West in "She Done Him Wrong." So if you can't see all the new pictures, why just go see May's and then you will have seen 'em all. They even got me going around saying, "You can be had."

Will Rogers

Give a big hand to little Finland. The only one to pay all she was supposed to. So in picking up hitch hikers along the road, give preference to anyone of Finnish descent. The slogan is, "Haul nothing but Finns all the way," Englishman a tenth of the way, but a Frenchman, a Pole, a Czechoslovakian, or a Belgian, let 'em take a bus.

Yours, WILL.

PIRATES' SLUMP REACHES ALARMING PROPORTIONS

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Benching of Lindstrom. Hildebrand Tops Ferrell. Peck May Pilot Red Sox. Pitt to Expand in Golf. Spencer's Jumping Task. Early Sock Beat Teuton.

GIBSON'S EXPERIMENT LOGICAL STEP

BETWEEN AN ATTACK that didn't score a run in 25 consecutive innings prior to the lone tally put across in the final stanza of yesterday's game in Chicago, and a pitching staff that has seen a member go the distance only seven times in the last 27 engagements, Manager George Gibson might well be puzzled as to where to place the blame for the Pirate slump that has caused the loss of 17 out of 27 contests since May 18. But it will be generally admitted that as his first experimental move Gibby did the logical thing in benching Freddie Lindstrom.

George Gibson

It may be argued that Woody Jensen, a fine ball player in other respects, doesn't suggest enough power to be an ideal regular, but he can hardly fail to hit above the present low standard of the Buccaneer outfield, and his presence in the lineup for a time may change the luck.

The failure of that outfield to hit even as much as .270 has been one of the most surprising developments of the present season. In any club's offensive, the bulk of the power is supposed to be represented by the outfield, but it has been just the opposite here. The Pittsburgh fly-chasers, individually and collectively, have been outbatted many points by the four regular infielders. What looked at first like the greatest outfield in captivity is now being referred to around the league as the Sunken Garden.

And Lindstrom, unquestionably, has been the weakest member of it. There is no reason to fear that Freddie will not find himself eventually and shine with his old brilliance, but, for the present, giving him a rest looks like the best thing for both himself and the club.

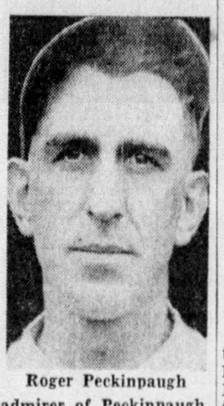
TWO FORMER MAJOR leaguers who were Pirate foes in the first two world series in which the Pittsburgh club was a principal bobbed up on an old timers' team playing a champion high school nine in Detroit. One was Hobe Ferris, who played second base for the Red Sox against the Bucs in 1903, and the other was Davey Jones, left-fielder for the Tigers in the title series of 1909.

Jones is as lean and erect as ever, but Ferris, past 50, has fattened to 201 pounds. Both withdrew after three innings. Ferris had not touched a ball in four years. He has resided in Detroit for 17 years, but rarely sees a big league game. Hobe still raves about the home-run hitting of his old teammate, Buck Freeman. "Buck once made 25 homers in a season," he recalls. "Imagine what he would do now with that lively ball!"

CHARLEY DEVENS, ex-Harvard star and now a Yankee farmhand at Newark, who has pitched shutouts in his last two games, the second against Ralph Birkofer, may be back with the Yanks before the season ends, according to Joe McCarthy.

The New York pilot plans to recall Devens if Newark gets a big pennant lead or falls far behind. And McCarthy predicts the youngster will be a great pitcher in the majors.

A SURE BET to be a contender for the American League pitching leadership is Oral Hildebrand, of Cleveland. Already he has won more games than he did during all of last year. In 1932, Hildebrand won eight and lost six. With the present season little more than one-third over, he has won nine against four defeats. Four of his victories were shutouts and in one of them he gave only one hit. The prediction that he would win from 15 to 18 games this year now sounds too conservative. Evidently Wes Ferrell no longer is the Indians' No. 1 pitcher.



Roger Peckinpaugh

THE POSSIBLE DROPPING of Bill Killefer by the Browns may not be the only managerial change of the coming weeks in the American League. Another may see Roger Peckinpaugh, supplanted by Walter Johnson in Cleveland, restored to a pilot's role.

Gossip around the junior circuit is to the effect that Marty McManus soon is to be dismissed as skipper of the Red Sox. He is said to be on the outs with General Manager Eddie Collins. The latter is a warm admirer of Peckinpaugh, and Roger is doped to be in line for the Boston job.

THE SUCCESS OF the first Tri-state intercollegiate golf tournament, sponsored by the University of Pittsburgh this week, has led Graduate Manager James Hagan to lay plans for a bigger and better meeting next year.

The 1933 event was organized on short notice, and with only schools supporting regular teams invited to take part.

EVEN THEN, THREE colleges sent in teams, and 19 golfers in all teed off. Next year, however, invitations will be extended to all schools in the district, and Hagan hopes to have from 12 to 15 institutions represented. The inclusion of such colleges as W. & J., Allegheny, Westminster, Penn State, Waynesburg, Davis and Elkins, Lebanon Valley and others would go far toward making the tourney a popular annual fixture.

HOWARD SPENCER, Geneva's Negro athlete, faces a tough job in the high jump in the National Collegiates at Chicago today, meeting among others such stars as Willis Ward, Michigan Negro and 1932 champion; Duncan McNaughton and Bob Osdel, of Southern California, and L. G. Richey, of Alabama Poly. But on his recent form, Spencer promises, as usual, to come out of the competition with credit.

California's athletes may not continue in this meet the team success they have scored in the I. C. 4-A games in 12 of the last 13 years. Southern California and Stanford are up against new opposition from the Middle West and South and repeating in the National Collegiates the I. C. 4-A triumph scored in Cambridge last month will not be easy.

BEFORE SAILING FOR Germany to marry Fraulein Anny Ondra, movie actress, Max Schmeling not only repeated his earlier statement that he had no intention of giving up the fistic game, but added that he plans to do more fighting than he has done in several years.

Max Schmeling

The German will return to this country in October or November to take part in two or three bouts during the winter. Following a meeting with King Levinsky in Chicago, he expects to get a match with some good heavyweight in New York and another for a February date in Miami.

THOUGH THE BAER-SCHMELING fight now may be classified as ancient history, boxing men still are speculating as to what happened to Schmeling to cause the loss of his punching power. In this connection an interesting theory is advanced by Zulu Kid, former flyweight title contender, and he is supported by other old fighters. They contend that while the Teuton did not lose officially until the tenth round he actually was beaten in the first frame. "The reason why Schmeling lacked his wallop was that one of the punches he stopped with his chin in the first round without apparent damage really cooked his goose," says the Zulu. "One of those first-round wallops took from him everything but his fighting instinct. The same thing has happened to me and to almost every other fighter. The German was fighting strictly on heart alone after the first round. Ordinarily he is a smashing hitter, but he could not punch hard enough after the first round to break an egg. Yes, sir, Baer really won that fight in the first round even though he did not get the official award until the tenth."

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

THERE'S DANGER IN YOUR EYES, CHERIE! . . . AT LEAST THAT'S WHAT THE BOYS SEEM TO THINK, FOR THEY ARE PICKING PRIMO CARNERA (ABOVE) TO TAKE JACK SHARKEY'S TITLE

Max Baer started this stuff when he belted the daylights out of Max Schmeling in their bout in New York last week. Now everybody's feeling shaky for Champion Jack Sharkey when he meets Primo Carnera, the Vast Venetian, in a title match for the benefit of Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's Milk Fund in the Madison Square Garden Bowl, New York, on June 29. All of a sudden they're raving about the marked improvement of Carnera and pondering the possible slipback from form of the no longer young Sharkey, who defeated Carnera easily two years ago and won the championship on a decision over Schmeling last year. The Baer fight was a fooler and there's no telling what'll come next unless you're a star gazer. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

SOCCER CHAMPS PLAY CURRY TEAM HERE

One of the best soccer attractions ever to be billed in Western Pennsylvania is carded for the Homestead athletic field at 6 p. m. this evening, when the New York American soccer club clashes with Curry in an exhibition game.

Old country fans who were thrilled with the Glasgow Rangers and Celtics, will see a club equal to those famous aggregations this evening. The Americans are led by Erno Schwarcz, probably one of the greatest soccer players that ever kicked a ball.

Fleming and Ballantyne, two former Scottish League stars, are with the club, and there is a sprinkling of American-born talent in the lineup that provides the punch.

Milne, playing outside left, is a Cardiff-born lad, and is classed as a great winger. Michaels, the center forward, is reputed to be a better shot than even Buff Donnelli.

Donnelli will have Johnny Jaap and Mike Bookie as his partners in the Curry forward line, while Bobby Murray, of the Union Switch team, will play outside right.

Grotto Lodge Holds Fish Fry Today

Islam Grotto Lodge No. 35 will stage a fish fry and outing this afternoon and evening at Turners Grove, West View.

President of Council Harry A. Little, chairman of the boxing committee, has arranged a fine card of bouts.

CRAWFORDS SET FOR DETROIT

The Pittsburgh Crawfords and Detroit are billed to clash at Greenlee Field today in a doubleheader in the National Negro League, with the first game slated to get under way at 3:45 o'clock. The second will be played under the lights, action being slated for 9 o'clock.

The local entry, hard pressed by Chicago for the league lead, will have to cop both games today to stay out in front. Manager Oscar Charleston intends to send Paige to the mound in the first battle.

The third game will be played tomorrow afternoon, with the time set for 3:45. The fourth and concluding game is billed for Monday night under the lights at 9 p. m., when the ladies will be admitted free.

Tomorrow the Dormont club plays Whitaker at South Park.

GOLF TOURNEY PACE SET BY MRS. HIGBEE

By TOM BIRKS

Mrs. Harley Higbee, of Detroit, set out this morning on the final 18-hole trek of the sixth annual Allegheny Country Club invitation tournament, with a one-stroke advantage over the brilliant Buffalo star, Peggy Wattles, and three strokes to the good over the defending champion, Mary K. Browne, of Cleveland.

Only eight of the field of 62 feminine stars who battled through the first 18 holes of play yesterday were conceded to be in the running today, and of the eight, only three were Pittsburghers. They were Mrs. J. B. Rose, of Allegheny; Mrs. Frank Campbell, of Stanton Heights, and Betty Abernathy, of Oakmont.

LEADER HAS 82

Shoooting sub-par golf on the outward nine, only to falter on the home stretch, Mrs. Higbee shot a sparkling 35-47—82 to lead home the field yesterday.

One shot behind the Detroit star was Peggy Wattles, of Buffalo, the 1931 winner, with 41-42—83. Mrs. Rose led the local contingent, tying with Miss Ada MacKenzie, of Toronto, with 84. Mary K. Browne had an 85, Louise Fordyce, of Youngstown, took an 86, and Betty Abernathy 88.

With a driving rain and a soggy and treacherous turf handicapping the field as it set out yesterday, it freely was predicted that few, if any, of the women stars would break 90, but Ada MacKenzie, an early finisher, quickly spiked this prediction by finishing with an 84.

Mrs. Higbee would have had a wonderful first-round total had it not been for a buzzard eight on the seventeenth hole.

STAR SCORES EAGLE

Miss Browne played in and out. Her eagle three on the par five eighteenth helped her score immeasurably, but she appeared bothered by the rain.

Betty Abernathy won the driving contest, staged yesterday afternoon, with smashes of 181, 119 and 178 yards. Mrs. Higbee won the approach and putting prize after first tying with Mrs. Benno Jenssen, of Fox Chapel, Miss Fritzie Stifel and Betty Abernathy.

Among the local stars who failed to come through as well as was expected were Mary Kuhn, of the Field Club, who took a 95; Anjeannette Hunter, of Oakmont, who finished with a 103; Mrs. W. H. Duff II, of Oakmont, who took a 105, and Mrs. F. M. Sloan, of Edgewood, who had 106.

The Alcoma Country Club linksmen defeated Wildwood, 36 to 28 in the first 18-hole match of their annual duel over the Wildwood course yesterday.

U. S. Team Holds Chess Tourney Lead

FOLKSTONE, England, June 17.—(AP.)—The United States team held the lead in the International Chess Federation tournament as the sixth-round matches and several from earlier rounds were completed. Czechoslovakia is in second place, followed by Austria, France, Sweden, Hungary, Lithuania and Poland.

The Americans defeated Latvia three matches to one in the sixth round yesterday.

Prentice Believes U. S. Davis Cup Chances Good

NEW YORK, June 17.—The captain of the United States Davis Cup team, Bernon S. Prentice, whose portfolio includes neither racquets nor tennis balls, is on the high seas today, bound for the international play in Europe.

He thinks Japan will give Australia a terrific battle in the European zone semi-finals this week-end while England is polishing off Czechoslovakia, but he likes the Anzacs' chances of besting Japan, beating the British the week-end of July 14, thus qualifying for the interzone final with his team a week later.

Then he believes the United States will come through against Australia and that the team has an even chance to win both the interzone final and the challenge round with France.

Jack Getz Loses Job as Umpire

EBENSBURG, Pa., June 17.—(AP.)—Release of Umpire Jack Getz, of the Mid-Atlantic League, and the signing of Cruff Cleary, former Notre Dame student manager, was announced last night by Elmer Daily, president of the league. Cleary is formerly of the Western League.

Daily declined to discuss why Getz, formerly of Allegheny County, was released. Baseball gossip indicates, however, that Getz lacked disciplinary power.

Sewickley Gymkhana Show on Today

The Sewickley Gymkhana Show got under way this morning at the Allegheny Country Club with shetland ponies monopolizing the opening events. The show is being staged under the rules of the American Horse Show Association.

The judges include Dr. Ralph Lynch, George McNary, R. K. Mellon and Torrence Miller.

SIMMONS STARS

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 17.—(AP.)—Al Simmons, Milwaukee's outstanding baseball figure, helped bat the Chicago White Sox to a 6 to 2 victory over the Brewers yesterday in an exhibition game. As his contribution to "Simmons Day," the major league batting leader drove in three of the Sox runs with a homer and single.

Fight Results

At Hollywood—Joe Teiken defeated Chris Pineda, 10 rounds.

At San Francisco—John Henry Lewis and Fred Lenhart drew, 10 rounds.

At San Diego—Al Truimans and Eddie Murdock drew, 10 rounds; Benny Mendoza defeated Ted Palacios, 6 rounds.

At Grand Rapids—Tony Herrera defeated Wesley Ramey, 10 rounds.

CHICAGO HANDS 'BUCCOS FOURTH LOSS IN ROW

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

It was a demoralized band of Buccaneers that landed in Pittsburgh this morning after a disastrous stand in St. Louis and Chicago. Less than one week ago, the Pirates had all of Western Pennsylvania ringing with praises in their honor on top of a sensational double victory over the high-flying Cardinals, but what started out to be a triumphant march ended in a complete rout.

One of the most startling developments of the Pirate season was flashed yesterday in Chicago when Manager Gibson benched Outfielder Fred Lindstrom in favor of Forrest Jensen. Gibby hesitated to take Lindy from the battlefront, but the former Giant's slump has been such a painful thing that the pilot felt it was up to him to make a change. Thus one of the highest-salaried players on the squad had to make room for a recruit.

SWETONIC TO HURL

Whether the Pirates maneuver a strategic retreat out of Chicago remains to be seen. In any event, Manager Gibson was able to reassemble his confused battalion at the Oakand Orchard, where

STARS TO MEET IN INAUGURAL ROUND DUELS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The forty-fifth annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships, classic net event of the district, get under way on the clay courts of the Stanton Heights Golf Club here this afternoon. In order to handle the inaugural session overflow of the tremendous field of 101 entrants, the four outdoor rectangles of the Pittsburgh Golf Club have been pressed into service for the day.

Contestants drawn in the lower half of the pairings are slated to cavort on the P. G. C. lot, the upper sector of the list remaining at Stanton Heights.

SCHEDULE HEAVY

Action is scheduled to start at 1:30 p. m. and to continue well into the evening. More than two score tussles are on the bill, the aim of tourney officials being to complete the initial round and part of the second bracket today and to push the milling along to stanza three tomorrow.

Numerous fast frays loom on the hid-lift program for both battle sites. The most promising engagement of the seance is set for the Heights with Charley Lockhart, former Princeton ace and seventh on the West Penn seeded roster, encountering Bill Thompson, rangy Wash-Jeff captain, whose varsity feats hereabouts the past two or three seasons have been distinctly outstanding.

Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. flash and second seeded contender, tops the Pittsburgh Golf Club card by taking on southpaw Neal Rumsey Mount Lebanon-Morgantown satellite. In the same area Vin Glidden, slashing Stantonian veteran, skirmishes with Dr. Chick Cochrane, redoubtable Edgewoodman, and Al McCabe opposes Quizzer Woods.

ARKLE DUE MONDAY

B. F. Arkle, defender of the David I. McCahill Cup, symbolic of the men's singles premiership, has been at Charleston since Thursday seeking to retain his West Virginia State crown and will not report in the Steel City until Monday, when he is booked to joust with Roland Neal, of Wilkinsburg.

Wally Arensberg, incidentally, has been chosen a member of the combined Harvard-Yale racquet squad that will oppose an Oxford-Cambridge coalition at Newport in the near future. The P. A. A. youth surmounted illness to head the Crimson outfit through the campaign recently terminated.

Because of the West Penn inaugural, P. T. A. Inter-Club League and Beaver Valley Tennis League hostilities are off for the day. The new Allegheny-Kiski Valley loop, however, will function without interruption.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE SCALES OF AN ECCENTRIC—Friedrich Alfred Krupp, ironmaster and father of Bertha, of "Big Bertha" fame, was a man of great eccentricity. He kept a pair of scales near the door of his office on which he required every visitor to weigh himself. The weights were accurately recorded in a ledger kept for the purpose. Until 1899, professionals of every nation, salesmen, technicians, engineers, artists, scholars, statesmen and generals, had to submit to being weighed before they were admitted into the magnate's presence. Herr Krupp died in 1902, leaving a fortune of $150,000,000, the largest in Germany. TRUNDLING HER SPOUSE—The World Fair in Paris in 1900 caused many people of a bizarre turn of mind to devise some spectacular means of reaching the French capital. Madame Germonde hit on the idea of trundling her husband in a go-cart from Liege to Paris. She accomplished this feat under the great acclaim of the populace, after covering a distance of 196 miles in this fashion.

TOMORROW: THE MAN WHO IMPRISONED HIMSELF.

SPORT VIGNETTES

When Connie Mack and John McGraw lead their all-star teams against each other at Comiskey Park, Chicago, on July 6, they will be opposing each other for the first time in two decades . . . They last clashed in the world series of 1913 . . . Previously they had opposed each other in the world series of 1905 and 1912 . . McGraw won the first of these battles and Mack the last two . . Mack is in his thirty-fourth season as a major league manager and has won nine pennants and engaged in five world series . . McGraw won 10 pennants with his New York Giants, engaged in nine world series, of which he has won five, and holds the record for winning consecutive pennants in the major leagues, with four.

You CAN beat the horses, take it on the authority of Tom Kearney, St. Louis layer of odds, who is known throughout the land . . . This despite the old axiom that the bookie generally winds up with the bankroll . . . Kearney's system is simple . . . "Stick with a good horse, and you can't lose," he says . . . His theory is that a good horse will win a majority of its races and the percentage is in favor of the player at any odds . . . But the trouble with the average race player is that he is always looking for a clean-up and tries to pick the long shots or goes for "tips."

Pie Traynor picked Max Baer to defeat Max Schmeling and Primo Carnera is his choice to defeat Jack Sharkey . . . He based both opinions on his reactions after seeing Baer and Carnera in other bouts . . . In Chicago, they are backing Barney Ross almost solidly to defeat Tony Canzoneri in their battle next week . . . If Ross wins and Carnera wins, we will have had three big upsets of form within a period of three weeks.—HARRY KECK.

Denver Star Meets Chicagoan for Title

DES MOINES, Ia., June 17.—(AP.)—Miss Phyllis Buchanan, a long-hitting blonde from Denver, made Wakonda's par look easy yesterday as she blasted the favorite from the trans-Mississippi golf tournament and assumed that position for today's final round.

Her victim in a stunning upset, 7 and 5, was Miss Lucile Robinson, of Des Moines, tournament medalist and conqueror of the champion, Mrs. Charles Newbold, of Wichita.

Today the slim Denver girl will tackle Mrs. Lillian Zech, Chicago veteran of many tournament jousts for the title.

GRAPHIC GOLF

HAND OPENED A BIT AT TOP OF SWING TO ASSIST COCKING.
BOBBY JONES' LEFT HAND GRIP IN FINGERS AND THUMB ALLOWS WRIST RELAXATION.

FINGER GRIP RELIEVES WRIST TAUTNESS

Gene Sarazen often has commented on the importance of a good grip in golf. It must be firm but not induce tautness in the wrists and forearms.

Bobby Jones, who has one of the best methods of holding the club, grasps the shaft in the left hand entirely with the fingers and thumb. The palm of the hand is thus kept away from the shaft, which is an excellent idea for all golfers to follow. Should the shaft lie there the hand would have to be clenched tightly to hold it in the same position throughout the swing and this in turn would cause a stiffening of the wrists.

Jones' grip of the left fingers and thumb is so firm that at the top of the swing he is enabled to open the hand slightly to enable more wrist cock.

This is particularly noticeable in the above illustrations and in actual play by the dip of the clubhead beyond the horizontal as the hips start to turn on the downswing.

It prevents a sudden change in the direction of the club head as the backswing ends and helps start the downswing leisurely.

B. F. Arkle Gains W. Va. Semi-Finals

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 17.—(AP.)—The four favorites in the state closed tennis tournament have fought their way through to the semi-finals today.

They will meet today when B. F. Arkle, of Wheeling, defending champion, plays Jim Curphey, Kanawha County champion, and Sam Cohn, of Beckley, 1932-runner up, battles Edward Blickle, of Huntington.

BRUINS DEFEAT BUCS AGAIN

they are due to take on the Cubs this afternoon in a single contest before the two clubs proceed eastward.

Boss Gibby will throw Steve Swetonic at the Bears today in the skip-stop game. Manager Grimm, of the opposing forces, probably will encounter with Pat Malone, who has been bad news to the Pittsburghers this season.

The Oaklanders will open their Seaboard invasion in Boston tomorrow when they take on the Braves in a dual bill. The Bucs are slated to return to Forbes Field in time to stage the annual Independence Day contests.

Losing their fourth contest in a row yesterday as they bowed to the Cubs, 9 to 1, the Pirates were fortunate in that they did not lose any further ground to the pace-setting Giants, who were trounced by the Dodgers. On the other hand, the fourth running defeat of the Pirates threw them into a virtual third-place tie with the frisky Cubs. It's anybody's race, nevertheless, among the four first division entries, and the Reds are only a few steps away from the leaders.

REACH SWIFT EARLY

Bill Swift experienced a first-inning blowup in Chicago yesterday which was the main reason for the collapse of the Pittsburghers. Bill was nicked for three runs and five hits in the opening chapter before Remy Kremer relieved him.

Kremer moved along cleverly for an inning, but Frank Demaree nicked the veteran for a three-run homer in the third to put the game on the ice. The Cubs scored another tally on Kremer in the fourth. Bill Harris and Waite Hoyt finishing. Hoyt was reached for two markers in the eighth.

Guy Bush reeled off eight runless rounds against the Pirates, Suhr working his way around in the ninth, which he started with a double.

WRESTLING RESULTS

At Seattle—Gus Sonnenberg, 210, Boston, tossed Bob Kruse, 200, Portland, Ore., two of three falls; Richard Stahl, 210, Germany, defeated Abe Kaplan, 212, New York sixth round, (Australian rules).

At Salt Lake City—Bill Longson, 208, Salt Lake City, defeated Pat Flanagan, 213, Boston, two of three falls.

OUIMET'S GOLF

By FRANCIS OUIMET

In a competition of importance such as the Open championship, the people who usually show up the best are those who keep their tee shots on the fairways and succeed in going down in one putt, and who also succeed in holding out in one putt on many greens. There was a time when the entry who could average two putts per green was considered a first-class putter.

That average no longer holds true. The successful golfer must do better than two putts; in fact, as I see it, he must not take more than 32 putts per 18 holes if he is to stay up with the leaders. Those who have won open championships in the past have come nearer to an average of 30 putts per 18 holes than anything else, and, therefore, I would figure 30 putts to the round as representing high-class putting. Anything below this, of course, would be marvelous.

Francis Ouimet

We know the importance that rests with the strokes played on the putting greens, but there are other shots, for example, that make it possible for the golfer to putt with success. To be sure, the long iron shot that stops somewhere near the hole makes things easy, or the explosion shot out of a sand trap. To my way of thinking, however, the one shot that paves the way for successful putts that may follow is the tee shot.

PLACEMENT NECESSARY

Recently, in playing a round on a course, I came to a hole that had an extraordinarily large fairway. There were traps on both sides and a trap somewhere near the 300-yard line placed to catch a topped second. However, the width of the fairway measured approximately 60 yards, which is an extremely wide and generous place to land. Standing on the tee, I noticed the pin was on the right-hand side of the green, and placed about 15 feet in from the front edge as well as the right edge. Noticing the position of the flag, I was curious to see just where my playing partner would drive to. His tee shot, well hit, traveled down the right-hand side of the fairway close to the 260-yard mark.

I deliberately aimed for the left hand side of the fairway and succeeded in placing my ball somewhere near the spot I was striving for. When it came to play the second shots, I was away naturally because I did not take the direct line to the pin. However, on glancing across the fairway to my opponent's ball, I saw he had very little green to pitch to around the pin and I was quite sure his second shot would not stop close. I knew if he hit short of the green, where the fairway was soft, his ball would stop instantly. I also knew that if he hit to the pin the ball would roll beyond because the green was fairly hard. Furthermore, in sizing up my own shot, because I had placed my ball to the left, I had a tremendous portion of the green to play to.

SECOND SHOT SIMPLER

It was obvious that my chances of getting close to the hole were far better than my opponent's. I had to play first, of course, and, with a mashie niblick, pitched the ball that hit eight or 10 feet short of the pin, and, because the green was fast, it rolled by the flag and came to rest 15 feet from the hole and close to the right hand edge. I had perhaps 60 feet of green to play to.

Then my opponent played a fine looking pitch that hit six feet beyond the cup, but it took one bound and scampered over the green into a trap. He was obliged, because of the position in which the pin was placed, to play a fairly strong mashie niblick, but, not having enough green to play to, he had little or no opportunity of holding his ball on the putting surface.

This is just one instances of why it is so necessary to place the tee shot. As matters turned out I holed my 15-foot putt for a 3, which probably could not have been possible if I had driven in the same general direction that my opponent did.

Crack Field Set For Title Grind

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP.)—A field of several score distance runners, including the cream of North America's marathoners, toed the mark today at George Washington's Mt. Vernon home for the 26-mile A. A. U. championship dash ending at the White House.

Leslie Pawson of Pawtucket, whose record-smashing run against a head wind in Boston's Patriots Day classic brought him into the national spotlight, was a favorite.

Dave Komonen, Finnish star of the Monarch A. C., Canada, who finished second to Pawson at Boston, was given an even chance. Percy Wyer, 98-pound Canadian teammate of Komonen, and himself no mean threat, predicted a victory for the latter should the day be warm, and the weather man promised just that.

GIANTS' LEAD CUT IN RACE FOR PENNANT

Associated Press.

The National League standing, an unstable affair at the best, was in one of its worst tangles today with two clubs knocking at the doors of higher positions as the teams wound up their home affairs and prepared for the second intersectional round of the season.

Due largely to the efforts of a recent teammate, Sam Leslie, New York's first place margin over the St. Louis Cardinals was reduced to four percentage points while the Chicago Cubs, after their second straight victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates, were still closer to the third place in another virtual tie.

Leslie, bearing out the old theory that a change of scenery usually is good for a ball player, celebrated his debut with the Brooklyn Dodgers by leading the way to a 3-1 victory over his old teammates. In the sixth inning he hit a long fly that allowed Danny Taylor to cross the plate and in the ninth he walloped his fourth home run of the season.

The Dodgers got only six hits off Hal Schumacher and Adolfo Luque while Van Mungo granted eight.

The Cubs started their hitting spree in the first inning and continued without a letup to pile up a total of 15 blows and record their ninth victory in 12 starts against Pittsburgh this season.

Bill Swift gave up five hits in a third of the first inning and of his three successors only Bill Harris was at all successful against the Chicago clouters.

The only other National League game, Boston at Philadelphia was postponed because of chilly, threatening weather. The Cardinals and Cincinnati were not scheduled.

Only Cleveland and Detroit in the American League were listed to play as the Eastern clubs began their westward trek, and they were rained out.

CROTHERS WINS STATE SHOOT

YORK, Pa., June 17.—(AP.)—Steven Morris Crothers, Chestnut Hill, captured the state amateur trapshooting championship yesterday, breaking 198 of a possible 200 targets. W. S. Beaver, Berwyn, with 195, was second.

Crothers, after losing two birds in his first hundred in the morning, made a perfect score in the afternoon and decisively overcame the threats of Ross Warren, Elkland; Alex Schwartz, Philadelphia; J. W. Yohn, Berwyn, and C. H. Newcomb, Philadelphia, all of whom were outstanding contenders after the morning program.

Class A—W. S. Beaver, Berwyn, 195; tie between C. H. Newcomb, Philadelphia, and Alex Schwarz, Philadelphia, at 194. Schwarz won shoot-off.

Class B—David Heim, Reading, 193; tie between J. W. Yohn, Berwyn, and Ross Warren, Elkland, at 192. Yohn won shoot-off.

Class C—Douglass Gelpin, Kennett Square, 190; R. Brubaker, Sinking Spring, 187.

Class D—Charles Rittle, South Langhorne, 192; tie between Mrs. W. O. Rowland, Jr., Torresdale, and H. G. Tulley, Philadelphia, at 180. Tulley won shoot-off.

Class E—J. M. Stinoson, Bradford, 168; J. M. Nessley, Altoona, 163.

Other scores follow:

Elmert Mount, Hamilton Square, N. Y., 191; Roy Wingert, Bradford, 189; C. D. Hemlyne, Bradford, 188; E. F. Hill, Highesville, 187; Eugene Murray, Sewickley, 187; H. S. Melchi, Coal Center, 187; W. F. Curis, Altoona, 186; Dr. G. F. Wright, Conemaugh, 181; S. W. Eshelman, Lancaster, 183; Alfred Maulhaupt, Bradford, 183; M. J. Hughes, Berwyn, 180; Harry Baumgardner, Windber, 179; P. R. Shirk, Elizabethtown, 178; J. M. Close, Wellsboro, 176; Dr. A. W. Vernon, Bradford, 175; J. K. Andrews, Kinzer, 173; Maxwell Harshberger, Altoona, 172; C. R. Keller, Hollidaysburg, 171; G. F. Shisler, Elizabethtown, 170; C. S. Bowers, Bareville, 169; G. E. Painter, Pittsburgh, 165; J. H. Keener, Maytown, 163; L. J. Shettig, Altoona, 162; O. J. Evans, Altoona, 153; J. W. Farquhar, California, Pa., 148; George Dietrick, Lancaster, 147.

Sport Shorts

DES MOINES, Ia.—Miss Phyllis Buchanan, of Denver, and Mrs. Lillian Zech, of Chicago, meet today in the final of the women's trans-Mississippi golf tournament. Miss Buchanan yesterday scored an upset by defeating Miss Lucile Robinson, tourney medalist, 7 and 5.

WESTBURY, N. Y.—The Aiken Knights defeated Tommy Hitchcock's Templeton team, 10-9, in a second place match of the Westbury Challenge Cup polo tournament yesterday, and entered the semi-finals. The Meadowbrook Ramblers defeated Roslyn, 14-5, and the Aknusti quartet downed Long Island, 11-9.

CHARLESTON, W. Va.—B. F. Arkle, of Wheeling, defending champion, meets Jim Curphey, Kana wha County champion, and Sam Cohn, of Beckley, opposes Edward Blickle, of Huntington, in semi-final round matches in the West Virginia state closed tennis tournament here today.

WASHINGTON, Pa.—That the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools intends to enforce its ruling that colleges must abandon subsidization of athletes or lose their accrediated rating was indicated today in letters sent to all member institutions. One of the letters was received by Dr. Ralph C. Hutchison, president of W. & J. College.

PHILADELPHIA.—Sam Gilpin, of Merion, Pa., meets Martin Buxby, of Texas, in the final of the Pennsylvania and Middle States tennis championships here today. Gilpin yesterday defeated Karl Kamrath, 6-8, 6-4, 7-5, and Gilpin won over Ensign C. Elliott Loughlin, 7-5, 3-6, 6-3.

LANSING, Mich.—(AP.)—Horse racing, with pari-mutuel betting, was approved by the Michigan Legislature in its closing hours early today, and indications are that Gov. William A. Comstock will sign the bill. The act will become effective immediately after approval by the Governor.

PHILADELPHIA.—(INS.)—Headed by Barney Berlinger, Penn decathlon sensation and Olympic star, a field of more than 200 athletes today will compete in the 19-event Middle Atlantic A. A. U. track and field championships on Franklin Field.

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—Accompanied by over 100 tourists, two teams of men and women athletes from Czechoslovakia arrived today on the liner Samaria en route to the Century of Progress in Chicago, where the athletes will give their native drills on "Sokol Day," June 25. Several hundred American members of Sokol, National Athletic Association, also will take part in the drills.

READING, Pa.—Defeating Mrs. Elmer Rice, of Lancaster, 6 and 5, Mrs. John F. Sevison, of Pottstown, yesterday became champion of the Central Pennsylvania Women's Golf Association for the fourth time in seven years.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—I have always muttered Boston was about the best baseball town in the U. S., and today I gets a picture postcard from the Hub city (a dandy one showing the Old North Church) and on the other side it's scribbled saying the Red Sox had 31,000 customers in their park last Sunday. They didn't have 31,000, because 31,000 was all it could hold. And the Red Sox, mind you, were in the eighth place.

Nick Altrock

This guy Yawkey that just bought the club must have picked out Boston with a divining rod, as it is sure a gold mine if it only has a decent team. If a Hub club ever got in a pennant race they would have to merge Fenway Park with Braves Field to hold the audience, with the Harvard Stadium for the overflow.

In some towns I could mention they wouldn't turn out 31,000 clients to see a double-header of Baer vs. Schmeling and Sharkey vs. Carnera, with a ball game and Ringling's Circus thrown in. But Boston is the sporting kind of town where you could sell admission tickets to walk through the Public Garden.

CRIMSON CREW BEATS YALE

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 17.—(AP.)—Wherever the urge might be today to burst into melodious strains of "Fair Harvard," there were sung, too, the praises of black-haired Gerry Cassedy and the rest of the Crimson's mighty eight-oared varsity crew, victors over Yale for the third successive year in the four-mile classic of American college rowing.

Cassedy stroked his last great race for Harvard last evening over the choppy waters of the historic Thames River and made it a song of triumph such as the Crimson cohorts have not enjoyed in 20 years. Behind him were four crewmates, all Nemesis to Yale's rowing prestige over a four-year stretch, as the heavyweight Harvard varsity came from behind to administer a sound beating to the Elis, within the last half mile, by a full length and a half.

The varsity gave Harvard two victories in three races. After Yale's undefeated freshmen pulled easily to a five-length triumph over the somewhat disorganized Harvard yearlings, victims of an early "crab," the Crimson junior varsity came from behind with a rush to beat the Eli Jayvees by a half-length in an exciting sprint. The two preliminary races were over the two-mile distance.

Not since a pre-war winning streak has Harvard enjoyed three straight over Yale in the big race.

Risko, Perroni Go Again Postponed

CLEVELAND, June 17.—(AP.)—The 10-round fight between Johnny Risko and Patsy Perroni, Cleveland heavyweights, postponed a second time has been re-scheduled for next Tuesday night after Mayor Ray T. Miller heatedly criticized the action.

Told of the second postponement late yesterday, the Mayor ordered the boxing commission to reconsider matters and sent word that "you'll fight tonight or not at all."

When Manus McCaffery, chairman of the commission, explained that the principals had been told of the postponement and some of them might not be located in time to fight tonight, the Mayor consented to the Tuesday date.

TROJANS LEAD IN N. C. A. A. TITLE MEET

CHICAGO, June 17.—(AP.)—A blistering battle between the University of Southern California, winner of the I. C. 4-A meet two weeks ago, and Indiana, upholding the honors of the Middle West, shaped up for the finals of the national collegiate track and field championships to be decided under the flood lights at Soldier Field tonight.

The Trojans, as a result of trials yesterday, placed 10 men in the finals to lead the qualifiers, while Indiana placed six, and Michigan and Louisiana State seven each.

KELLER ELIMINATED

Misfortune befell Jack Keller, of Ohio State, national collegiate hurdling champion, who was to make his farewell in college competition tonight. The blond Buckeye, shaken up in an automobile accident before the meet, fell on the seventh hurdle of the qualifying heat and then plunged headforemost into the eighth barrier. When he dragged himself off the cinders, there were ugly gashes in both knees.

Although Keller came back with his knees bandaged for the low hurdles, the handicap was too great to overcome, and he finished fourth, failing to qualify.

Ralph Metcalfe, of Marquette, national collegiate sprint champion, figures to have no more than a gallop in winning the 100-yard dash and the 220. The big Negro won his qualifying heat in the century in 9.9 seconds, eased up. Metcalfe had the best time on the furlong, clicking it off in 21.9, winning easily.

Three Pittsburgh district stars will compete in the finals tonight. Joe Beggs, of Geneva College, qualified for the finals in the javelin and Bill Miller, of West Virginia, in the hammer throw. Howard Spencer, of Geneva, is a favorite in the high jump.

SCHOOLBOY STARS

Surpassing even the mark of Metcalfe in the 100-yard dash, Jimmy Owens, an ebony bundle of speed from East Technical High School, of Cleveland, stole the show in the preliminaries of the interscholastic championship.

Heralded as the greatest of the country's coming dashmen, the Cleveland Negro, apparently running well within himself, raced his heat of the century in 9.7 seconds.

Owens came right back to share best time honors in the 220-yard dash with Helbing, of North Side High School, Fort Worth, Texas, at 22.1 seconds. In his third and last appearance of the day he ran a brilliant anchor leg to give East Tech a victory and a new record in qualifying for the finals of the half mile relay. The Cleveland quartet, behind until Owens took the baton, won easily in 1:30.5, bettering by eight-tenths of a second the old mark set by Central High, of Columbus, O., in 1930.

Grid Star to Wed Coach's Daughter

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 17.—(INS.)—A romance that might have been written in a campus novel, that of a football star and his coach's daughter, was revealed today.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. D. Jones announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Betty Shearn Jones, to Joseph P. Crowley, Yale senior, who for two years past has been the Elis' first string fullback. Tad Jones was formerly Yale head coach. He conducts a large coal business here.

The wedding date was not announced.

SCHOOL GAME MONDAY

Unable to obtain the use of Olympia Park for Tuesday, Forbes School and Lemington will clash on Monday for the grade school baseball championship of the city. Lemington is champion of Section I and Forbes of Section II.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

Newlyweds Shouldn't Object To Help Old Folks

Broken dreams—shattered hopes—that's the cruelest part of the depression.

Most of us are game enough to stand any passing hardship, make any temporary sacrifice, and laugh while we do it. But to have the plans of years swept away—

That's what has happened to Madeline and George and many another couple of young lovers. Five years ago these two began, with high hearts, to plan their future together. For five years they've been telling each other "it won't be long now"—and today that future seems farther away than ever. In fact, it just seems as if there isn't any.

And why?

The Old Folks. The Depression has taken their money. Worry has taken its toll of Dad's health. Even if Dad could get a job he couldn't work. That means it's up to George, and George isn't earning any fortune.

George says the only solution is to have his folks live with them.

"But if they come, what of those happy dreams of a future 'for just us two?'" worried Madeline wonders.

"Now please understand," she cries, "I do think a lot of his folks. They have been wonderful to me, but I simply do not approve of young people and parents living together. There are bound to be differences, no matter how amiable a person is, don't you think?

"I believe that young people deserve the right to build and plan their lives together. To me that is half the happiness of married life. There are certain joys that come from being able to feel the independence of working things out by yourselves.

INSUFFICIENT SALARY

"Now what I am wondering is whether George is right in thinking of his folks as he does. Should they expect him to keep on paying the rent and grocery bills, or has he the right to marry and have a home of his own?

"I would be more than willing to do anything I could financially, after we're married, to help. But his salary now just about suffices for one household.

"Please help me," Madeline implores. "What do you think?"

What do I think?

I think it's a tough spot, but your own muddled thinking is making it tougher. You ask about your and George's "rights." Of course you have rights—but under the present circumstances, just what would you have him do? You say yourself that his folks are destitute and helpless. So if he and you marry and his folks don't live with you—what's your idea about what'll become of them? Are you proposing that they starve while you enjoy your home alone and unhampered? No; of course you're not. But that's exactly the way you sound.

A PET PEEVE

Trouble with you, youngster, is—You want life to fit your Pet Pattern, and if it doesn't, you won't play!

But life may pass you by forever, as it has passed many another Pouter, if you insist on Having Your Way. So, think it over. How much are love and marriage worth to you? Isn't it better, in times like these, to take a half loaf if you can't get a whole?

I don't think that "living with the old folks" is the best way to start marriage, either, but—it can be done. And it has been done successfully. Do you love George enough to compromise and sacrifice a little? Or will you let him go, just to satisfy your Pet Peeve?

And while you're talking of rights, don't forget that Dad and Mother have rights, too. They, too, might have safeguarded their future happiness and comfort by letting George do with far less in the days of his helplessness—or by not having him at all! So, while you're reckoning rights, how about considering a few obligations?

"SOME FUN!"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Or should the title have been "Ah there?"

This is the brand new summer girl—oh deathless words!—of 1933. And yet—where have we seen her before? HAVEN'T we seen her somewhere? "Oh tell me pretty maiden" are you not the gay young shade of a girl who pedaled down Fourteenth street when shining-clean Denver, Col., was a lusty young town turning into a city? When hansom cabs trundled up Fifth avenue, New York, and one felt rich riding in them as one never possibly can riding in a motor car?

It seems to me I saw you in my thumbed and loved GIBSON BOOK, where I first fell in love with "black and white."

No, she isn't a shade—but a rosey girl of this moment, and she's gone big-sleeved polka-dot and plaid blouse, belt, buckle, pancake sailor, maybe with daisies on it!—and bicycle. And I think she's a cookie. I think she's pretty, smart and picturesque, and I think she's wise. Wise to turn to so simple a thing for her fun. Wise to slow up and look at the world around her. Wise to exercise her young body in a healthy way. Wise to go on picnics in her own foot power.

Jack isn't in the picture with this Jill—but I bet he's pedaling along furiously behind to get a look at her. And look who's on the tricycle!

NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Notes of Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance and I are invited out of town for a week-end. Upon returning home, should he write and thank our hostess, who is really my friend, not his, or would my writing for the both of us be sufficient? M.

You should write your letter of thanks to your hostess, and your fiance should write his letter of thanks to her. It would be qhite out of order for you to make your letter include his thanks.

Wedding Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Is sending a wedding announcement considered necessarily a bid for a gift? My coworkers have given a shower for me, and of course I intend to send announcements to them.

However, this is the question: In my field of work, there are supervisors with whom I come in contact once in a while. With one or two I have done committee work. Then there is the superintendent who knows all the people working under him in a business way. Is it proper for me to send wedding announcements to all of these people?

2—For a while after my marriage I shall live with my sister-in-law. She has a beautiful home in which I wouldn't mind if any of my friends would visit me. However, since it isn't really my own home, is it proper to put the "at home" phrasing on the wedding announcements, or should it be omitted? I may live there for a year or two. A.

1—A wedding announcement is not a "bid for a gift." It is simply a formal announcement of the news of your marriage, mailed after the marriage has taken place.

If both wedding invitations and announcements are to be sent, announcements are sent to those who have not been invited to the wedding.

2—Under the circumstances, I believe it would be better taste to omit the "at home" address announcement.

Contract Bridge

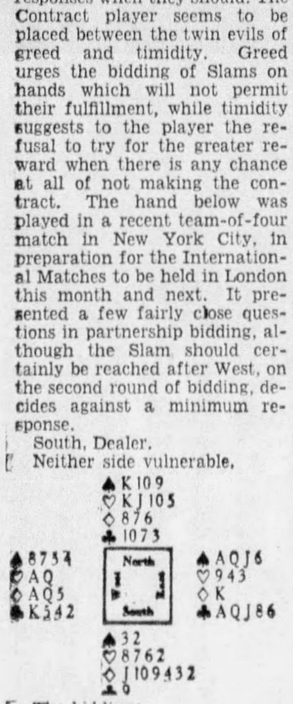
HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Correct Slam Bidding

One of the principal barriers to reaching Slams is the tendency of many players to give minimum responses on hands that are not actually minimums. On the other hand, many Slams are bid and not made because players do not make minimum responses when they should. The Contract player seems to be placed between the twin evils of greed and timidity. Greed urges the bidding of Slams on hands which will not permit their fulfillment, while timidity suggests to the player the refusal to try for the greater reward when there is any chance at all of not making the contract. The hand below was played in a recent team-of-four match in New York City, in preparation for the International Matches to be held in London this month and next. It presented a few fairly close questions in partnership bidding, although the Slam should certainly be reached after West, on the second round of bidding, decides against a minimum response.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 N T (1)	Pass	3 ♣ (2)
Pass	4 ♣ (3)	Pass	4 ♠ (4)
Pass	5 ♠ (5)	Pass	6 ♣ (6)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The hand offers no other bid.

West for a moment considered the possibility of getting in an additional round of bidding by opening with one club rather than one notrump but the suit was so weak that he correctly dismissed the idea.

2—East's hand is rather weak for the Force, but after all he has no good alternative bid. Two clubs is entirely too weak. Two notrump or three notrump with the distribution would be unwise. In view of West's Opening bid of notrump the singleton King has an added value which probably justifies the Force.

3—West's choice of a bid here is very close. It is true the hand contains 3½ honor-tricks while 3 is sufficient to justify a non-vulnerable notrump opening. However, there is an apparent fit in clubs and three notrump may quite easily close the bidding when a Slam is conceivably possible. There is danger that game in clubs may not be made, but something must be ventured if anything is to be gained.

5—West discloses that he can also support spades.

6—In Rubber or team-of-four play East's decision between clubs and spades is not even close. The road of safety should be chosen.

South's Opening lead was a diamond and all 13 tricks were made as the spade was successfully finessed and the King captured.

TODAY'S QUESTION

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇
Pass	2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

You, West, hold:
♠ A 6 2 ♡ 4 3 ◇ K J 9 3 ♣ K 10 5 3

What card do you lead?

Answer: The Spade 2. This is by far the best lead on this hand. A heart lead will only trap whatever heart holding your partner has. A diamond is sure to give up a trick, and the club lead is at best a shot in the dark. The low spade lead will enable you to clear three rounds of the suit, whether you or your partner obtain the lead next, and possibly stop a cross-ruff, which may be Declarer's only path to game.

Heart of a Wife

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Auto-Gyro Brings New Hope—and New Menace

"Oh-h," Marion's relieved ecstatic whisper had almost the effect of a delightful squeal. "The auto-gyro's coming back. Surely Uncle Dicky and Major Grantland will come down right away, and then our troubles will be over."

"Not if those devils out there get a chance to ambush them," Ronald said. "Their motto is 'Shoot first and think about it afterward.'"

"We may be able to play at that game, too," I said. "We mustn't waste any time or strength worrying over ominous possibilities. Instead, let us nerve ourselves to be ready to seize any possibility of helping. The only things we can do now are to keep perfectly quiet, to watch and to wait. And let me assure you, my dears, I agree with what you haven't yet said, those are the hardest tasks we could be given."

"You've said it," Ronald muttered, and then as the whirring grew louder, Marion caught my arm.

"Look! Auntie Madge!" she whispered. "It's circling right over us. They must be going to land. Oh! Ronald, what is it? Auntie Madge, quick!"

I gave her a warning "Hush!" even as my arms went out to help her support Ronald, who had slumped against her.

"Has he fainted?" she whispered.

"No." The explosive whisper seemed to exhaust the boy's breath, for he panted painfully before he could speak again. "I'm just a miserable, no-good—I can't stand up, that's all. I've tried, but I—I can't."

SEE SIGNAL FLARES

"If you call yourself names like those again, I shall agree with you," I said sternly. "You've simply gone far beyond your strength, in your condition, and are paying the penalty. You've accomplished marvels for us already. Now settle down here against the fence, and keep your revolver ready for any possible emergency."

"Oh! Look!" breathed Marion, "between us and the big tree!"

I followed her eyes, and gave a gasp of astonishment mingled strongly with terror. For upon the ground at the place Marion had indicated, there suddenly appeared small flares, such as I knew were used to mark landing places for auto-gyros. But who could be thus signaling? No one of our party was anywhere near us. Yet it seemed an impossible coincidence that another auto-gyro than the one piloted by Dicky should be coming down in this place at this time.

After that first savage exclamation from Nick and Tony, there had been no further sound from them. Had they spread out to beat the field for us, or were they coming back toward the fence, and their car?

MADGE INVESTIGATES

Suddenly there came to me one of the queer intuitions—premonitions—warnings—I never have known what to call them—but whenever I have disregarded the mental commands they have given me, I have been sorry, and I knew that I must obey this impulse to rush over to those lighted flares, and find out who was responsible for them.

"Dear children," I whispered, huskily, but with inexorable decision, "I'm going over to those flares. Don't dare to move from here, until you see there is no other escape from those gangsters. I shall come back the first second I can. Don't hesitate to use that revolver, Ronald, if you have to."

Their choky, protesting entreaties not to go, followed me, and I had to put Marion's arms away ruthlessly. Then I was free, and moving rapidly across the plowed ground toward the flares. I could see only a few inches before me, and trusted the same friendly darkness to conceal my own movements. But when I had left the plowed ground, and traveled a few yards across the meadow, I dropped prone as I heard faint sounds which I guessed were the footsteps of Nick and Tony coming from the big tree.

And then, as I wriggled nearer the flares, the man who had put them there, bent to them again. Surely I knew that silhouette! Hugh Grantland was not in that circling auto-gyro with Dicky, but down on the ground, lighting flares for my husband's safe descent.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

A Strange Disease of the Blood

For the past quarter of a century, those interested in diseases of the blood have been studying the problem of "erythremia." This disease was first described in 1892 by Vaquez, a physician, and is sometimes called "Vaquez's disease."

Dr. Copeland

Erythremia is a chronic disease of the blood. In this disturbance there is a marked increase in the number of red blood cells and in the hemoglobin or coloring matter of the blood. Its cause has never been discovered.

It afflicts men and women, usually in late middle life. Though not hereditary, a number of cases in the same family have been reported. The ailment is slow in its onset and many years elapse before the victim is aware of its presence.

The disease is first brought to the attention of the sufferer by the peculiar congestion of skin and mucous membranes. The skin assumes a very marked, mottled, brick-red color. This is most apparent on the face, especially the cheeks, nose and ears. The lips are purplish-red or plum colored.

The sufferer complains of fullness in the head, dizziness, irritability, weakness and of nervous disorders. The blood pressure is high and the spleen is greatly enlarged.

The increase in the number of red blood cells is amazing. Normally, a cubic millimeter of blood contains about three and one-half million red blood cells. In this disease it may contain as many as six, eight or even twelve million.

No explanation has as yet been given for this increase.

Doctors have reported cases where the only complaint of the patient is the peculiar color of the skin. One early writer of this disease said: "The patient is more red than sick." But as a rule, sufferers from this disease require careful medical attention.

For many years little relief other than by "bleeding" could be offered to victims of this disease. Venesection, or "letting" of large amounts of blood, gave temporary relief. At one time it was thought that "splenectomy," or removal of the spleen, would be beneficial. This has since been disproved and most authorities now strongly oppose this procedure.

Beneficial results have been obtained by the use of X-ray and radium. These methods give more lasting relief. They are the most valuable known means of combatting this strange malady.

When the Baby Cries

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

There has been a great deal of discussion for and against letting an infant cry. And, as usual, the middle course seems best.

We must all realize, to start with, that the only language a baby possesses is his cry. It is his way of telling mother he is hungry, that he needs fresh clothing, or that he needs water. "But when he wakes in the night and cries for no apparent reason, what shall I do then?" asks the young mother. It is only fair to go to the child, examine him to see that he is comfortable. If it is not his feeding time, if his clothing is fresh and clean, I should say, turn him to a different position and go back to bed. If he does a little fussing after that, let him fuss.

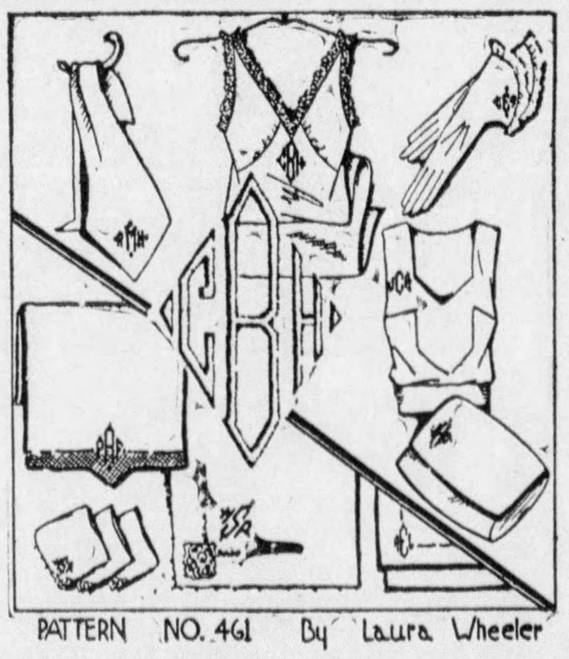
However, in our so-called "new" theory of hands off the baby, a lot of us are encouraging cry-babies. Many of us are using this "advanced" idea as an alibi to ease our own duties, which we all know, are numerous when a new baby arrives. And, in so doing, we are teaching the baby that until he wears mother entirely out by his screams, he will get exactly nothing.

The child who cries too long and gets no care, will resent it in proper human fashion by getting angry. And anger is such a valuable human emotion that we should never let an infant know that he can prostitute it.

The child who is crying in a rage can be diverted, and should be diverted, before he is picked up. One mother tinkles a small bell until Sonny's eyes open wide in pleased astonishment. Then she picks him up quickly, with: "There's my happy boy. Now he may come to mother."

Never let abnormal crying get a child anything. Pick him up only when he is again happy. On the other hand, heed the cries that are nature's signals, and your child will never feel that he must yell to get what is his rightful share of attention and care.

MONOGRAMS FOR ACCESSORIES



PATTERN NO. 461 By Laura Wheeler

Monograms have always been a singularly popular decorative motif. A design in itself, the monogram still keeps its personal touch through the use of one's initials. To the bride-to-be—to the established housewife, it has appealed as a most fitting way to add distinction to her linens. And Dame Fashion, always quick to sense a smart, new, touch, has whimsically decided to use the monogram on dresses, dress accessories, and even lingerie this season. In this pattern a simple monogram is offered in three sizes, the center letter measuring 1 inch, 2 inches and 3 inches, the two other letters being in proportion. The letters are given separately with the right and left side initials drawn to form a diamond shape when grouped with the center initial of each monogram.

Send 10c for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Household Hints

Instead of scrubbing hearth tiles, rub them with floor or furniture polish. They will look much cleaner and take on a splendid polish.

Allow a place in the backyard or the garden for exclusive rights of children. It will save both elders and youngsters many attacks of "nerves."

Stains on satin can be removed by treating with a mixture of eucalyptus oil and milk in equal proportions. Apply with a cloth that has been rinsed in warm water.

Curtains which are difficult to hang after washing should be pinned into their folds at the bottom with drawing pins. Remove the pins after a day and they will hang evenly.

AN ORDINANCE—Authorizing the issuing of a warrant in favor of John F. Kunz Company in the sum of $368.32, in payment of extra work on Contract No. 4388, Controller's Office File, for Construction of Viaduct, Bridge and Viaduct Approach on Mt. Washington Roadway Contract No. 2, Foundations.

WHEREAS, In the execution of Contract No. 4388 Controller's Office File, for Construction of Viaduct, Bridge and Viaduct Approach on Mt. Washington Roadway, Contract No. 2, Foundations, it was necessary for the contractor, John F. Kunz Company, to do certain work not included in the contract for said improvement, involving 147.33 cubic yards of excavation at $2.50 per cubic yard, or a total cost of $368.32, in excess of the amount of excavation agreed upon in the contractor's bid; and,

WHEREAS, The Director of the Department of Public Works authorized this extra work, and in his letter to the President and Members of Council under date of May 11, 1933, recommends payment thereof; Therefore

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City

WORK, NOT DOLE IS FORD PLAN

DETROIT, June 17.—(AP.)—"Work everywhere—not the kind of work that pays a dole, but a wage with a margin."

That is the formula of Henry Ford for restoration of the economic balance.

He advanced it yesterday in an interview in which he also advocated elimination of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as the quickest way to get rid of the dole; termed recognition of Russia by the United States a minor matter since Russia seems to be getting on "very nicely" without it, and said that if this generation doesn't forget the war debts, "our children will."

Of the R. F. C., he said it "is nothing more than a systematized dole."

He told of a plan he said he was working on "whereby the Ford Company would make it possible for its 9,000 dealers to hire men to work on small parts. He said:

"This would be sending work and wages directly to the people of every community."

ARREST DRIVER AS HIT-RUNNER

An ambulance driver was under arrest as a "hit-run" driver after police said he drove his machine into a milk truck in Baum boulevard early today.

The driver, Harry J. Bovard, 25, of 1221 Dennison avenue, was lodged in Oakland Police Station on a charge of violating the automobile laws. He was taken prisoner after the license number of the machine had been broadcast.

Bovard's companion on the ambulance, Charles Covgit, of 374 South Negley avenue, was arrested on a charge of drunkenness.

The driver of the milk truck, Russell Pirl, 28, of 7801 Hamilton avenue, escaped injury by jumping.

GRIEVING WIFE, 64, KILLS SELF

Mrs. Elizabeth Swank, 64, of 615 Woodward avenue, Stowe Township, killed herself in her home yesterday—the fourth anniversary of her husband's death, according to the Coroner's report.

A bullet wound in the right temple and a revolver at her feet, the victim was found seated in a rocking chair in the kitchen by Philip Davis, of 2 George street, McKees Rocks, a grandson, Deputy Coroner Roy Addlesburger said.

She was said to have been brooding over the death of her husband.

Reizenstein Marks His 77th Birthday

Surrounded by his children and grandchildren, Louis Reizenstein yesterday celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday at the country home of his son, Louis Reizenstein, Jr., at Bakerstown. Mr. Reizenstein is founder of one of the oldest china shops in Pittsburgh. He was born in 1856, and during the days of Pennsylvania's oil excitement was located in Franklin.

FIGHT WAGE CUT ON U.S. BUILDING

An attempt has been made to slash the wage scale for plasterers on the new Postoffice Building from $12 a day to $6, it was testified in the hearing yesterday on an injunction proceedings brought against Aronberg-Fried Company, general contractors, and Hachmeister-Lind Company, sub-contractors for the plastering.

The assertion that the sub-contractor at the expiration of the $12 wage agreement on May 31 offered to hire union workmen at $6 a day was made by Edward J. Leonard, business agent for Local No. 31. He said when the union refused to accept the offer they were "locked out."

Shooting of Son Jails Father Again

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 17.—(INS.)—William Henry, 49, accused of shooting off the arm of his son last May 7, when the boy pleaded with him to stop beating his mother, was back in jail today. Henry was released under $2,000 bail Wednesday to await action on four charges of assault and felonious shooting. Yesterday a bench warrant was issued in which bail was increased to $4,000. Henry surrendered.

3 Slot Machines Seized at Barbecue

Three slot machines were reported seized by county detectives at the Highland Barbecue yesterday. Patrick McBride, alleged proprietor, was ordered to appear before Alderman Thomas A. Flanigan.

Anthony F. Fishinger was arrested, the detectives said, following the seizure of a still in North avenue, Millvale.

Third North Side Theft Suspect Held

Wilbert Arent, 33, of 1961½ Liedtertafel way, was held by city detectives today as the third member of an alleged North Side robber gang. He is accused of complicity in the robberies of the Isaly store, 812 Federal street, and the North Recreation Bowling Alley, 1325 Reedsdale street. The others were arrested Saturday.

James R. Smith has been appointed councilman for East McKeesport, by Judge Samuel H. Gardner, to take the place of J. Fred Record, resigned because of ill health.

FOOD PRICES HERE JUMP

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP.)—Food prices took a jump ranging variously between 3 and 4 per cent in 54 Pennsylvania cities from April 15 to May 15.

Philadelphia and Pittsburgh paid 4 per cent more during the period, the Labor Department reported yesterday. Scranton's increase was 3 per cent. The average increase in 51 other selected cities was 3 2-3 per cent.

Drops of 9 per cent in Philadelphia and Scranton and 6 per cent in Pittsburgh occurred, however, during the year ended May 15.

Druggist Indicted In Relief Fraud

F. J. Bocchicchio, druggist at 6300 Frankstown avenue, was indicted on a charge of false pretense by the county grand jury late yesterday, on charges that he had cheated the county welfare fund out of several hundred dollars by collecting for alleged fake perscriptions.

AUDACIOUS GIRL REVEALS SECRETS OF SOUTHERN SEAS

Jims' way with horses was marvelous. In their cramped space and with no exercise, they grew restive. A stampede of eight horses would have raised havoc with the schooner; but frequently he went back to pet each one and speak a cheerful word that acted like magic on the nervous animals.

After two days at sea Jim ceased sporting white duck trousers, doubtless because the lady didn't register sufficient appreciation of the gesture; he reverted comfortably to khaki shorts. In a land of grotesque outfits, his was supreme.

Behold him with a vast expanse of hairy awkward leg between shorts and heavy wool socks; great hobnail boots; a worn khaki shirt, frayed where the sleeves had been sawed off above the elbow, and with a freckled sunburned throat and chest peeking from his open shirt; two sombreros, one fitted within the other, as is the custom with men in the bush, from under which the ginger hair straggled over a humorous eye. Add a cartridge belt carrying a Colt 38. There you have Jim, trail blazer of the hinterlands.

I think he would have liked to be a handsome man, particularly in the eyes of women. Once I said to him, "You look like Abe Lincoln." Making a wry little face, he said, "He was a very ugly man, wasn't he?"

Jim was a queer person. I imagine he had always been getting in the way of himself, always regretfully but surely putting the worst foot forward, especially with women. But he had a wide knowledge that came from no superficial learning or observation, and his keen insight into situations and people belonged to an uncommonly well-ordered brain.

PASS VOLCANO

One night he was talking about his life in New Guinea, especially about his coming recruiting expedition, what he hoped to gain financially from it, and of the known obstacles facing him and Brearly. I had my own mental reservations about recruiting as a profession. Finally Jim said: "That's a rotten way for a man to earn his living, isn't it? Buying and selling other human beings? Sometimes I despise myself for it." There was no satisfactory answer handy for me, to Jim, so I made none. And the next minute I welcomed Brearly's approach.

One morning another volcano, Manum, rose to starboard; we passed so closely that I could see the lava-gutted sides. Manum has been good for five years, but by day she wears a wreath of smoke and by night the sky glows from her breath. On our port side stretched the dark jungle of New Guinea mainland, its dense shore-line broken occasionally by a tiny native "soda-water" (salt-water) village. Hardly out of the shadow of the volcano, we dropped anchor half a mile off shore. We were at the plantation of Awar.

NO STRAINED RELATIONS

It seemed that we had the lanes of the Pacific to ourselves; not since we left Madang days before had we set eyes on a sail. Life had gone on aboard the schooner with amazing smoothness and good-humored harmony. Apparently carrying a woman aboard wasn't spelling disaster. By unspoken common consent all the men had accepted me as part of the normal state of affairs. That was wise of them because I was irremovably there, and the schooner hadn't enough spare room for strained relations.

Under ordinary circumstances the mate's language was that of a gentleman, but the angels must have clapped their hands to their ears when he began ordering about lazing kanakas. I have stood by listening without flinching to his unrestricted flow of language, after which he would pass me by, often bent on further and more tangible chastisement, with no thought of apology for the assault on my delicate feminine ears. I took this, from the mate, as a tribute, for, bless him, he gave me credit for good sense and understanding of conditions, and for adapting myself to them without reservations. If his language offended me, I didn't have to stick around. We all know that.

Awar lies stark, alone, one of those gallant plantations holding its own against the primal forces of New Guinea. It faces an active volcano. The jungle crouches with hungry eyes at its back. Fifty miles further on the Sepik River empties its swift current into the ocean. Belligerent savage tribes inhabit the surrounding jungle, from which the white man and woman and child at Awar would have no refuge if these turned hostile, although an avenging Government would soon inflict harsh punishment for an outrage. The crazy little Durour and an occasional schooner out of Madang make theoretically periodic stops at the plantation, bringing supplies and lifting the copra. The D. O. stops there when he goes on patrol. Otherwise there are precious few white visitors.

CONTENTED EXILES

Among our various supplies for the owner were several hundred cases of petrol, largely for the gasoline motor and the American motor lorry which this progressive plantation puts into use.

The skipper went with the first pinnance of cargo, and returned with an invitation for all of us to go ashore. Kanakas were waiting at the reef to carry us to land. Even Jim, dangling like a monkey on a stick, submitted to this undignified approach.

Here was no decadent, ill-managed plantation, taken over by some Sydney ex-shoeclerk; it is a progressive organization, a little monarchy in the wilderness, revolving around three happy white people—a man and his wife and their little girl, whom her daddy calls his "ten boys." Some people, a few people, are meant for life in the wilderness. This man and woman were. They had met in Egypt during the war—he a captain of the Anzacs, she an Australian nurse. Both were young and full of courage; some trick of fate threw them together. Then the end of the war . . . a wedding . . . and the search for a life that would not be too drab after the interlude of war. So here they were, contented exiles from the world, in the heart of New Guinea.

VISITED BY SAVAGES

On the pleasant cool veranda I ate for the first time of soursop, a sort of small custard-apple with a center so soft and creamy that it must be eaten from the rind with a spoon; it has a delicate sweetish flavor somewhat like the ghost of a raspberry custard. Here, too, came wild kanakas from the hills, down to barter their copra, carved curios, spears, ivory nuts, anything barterable, for bright calico, salt, tobacco, or gay trinkets and colored powders, at the trade-store kept by the planter's wife.

They were a fantastic, savage-looking lot; the men with wide and painfully tight girdles about their waists, which gave an abnormally bulky appearance to their chests and shoulders; the hill women clad merely in bushy grass skirts, colored intricately with native pigments, their breasts a lacework of tattooing. Knowing we were in notoriously bad country, I admit to certain misgivings about this group of 20 untamed savages who had descended upon us. But there was no need for worry—not at the moment, at any rate. The faces of the men were ugly, as I am sure only New Guinea faces can be ugly, with their tight, screwed-back coiffures and spike-toothed necklaces; but they were as peaceable as lambs. Sometimes when the little marys would begin chattering all together a broad-shouldered male would savagely turn with a "Pst!" which would silence them for a moment but discompose them not in the least. Like children, they were easily moved to laughter and to fear. The gramophone never fails to excite fear in a kanaka. Some one put on a record, and as the voice came from the square oak "bokis" all chatter ceased. They were rooted to the spot, electrified and yet fascinated, by the seemingly supernatural, disembodied human voice.

INFLUENCE OF WHITES

I had frequent occasion, particularly on these isolated plantations having no obvious connection with the protective government, to marvel at the influence a white man exerts over overwhelming hundreds of savages. Of course, where official control has penetrated, the native remembers that relentless avenging god Gov'men' which has swooped down more than once in retributive wrath, inflicting with flame and firestick memorable payback. The native exhibits a surprising amount of fairness on such occasions, stoically accepting punishment for crimes. The Gov'-men's difficult task is to convert the native's sense of right and wrong to its own standards.

It was here, near Awar, that I caught my first glimpse of an authentic Lotus Eater. We lay over at Awar for a couple of days. The Pacific stretched like a blue mirror to the rim of the world. The schooner sat comfortably and patiently on the blue, like a white gull. The skipper contributed tinned asparagus and some beer to the party, so that our inroads on the plantation's stores would not be too great. Only the mate was missing at the festivities ashore.

SURRENDER AT BREDA—THE PEAK OF HAPSBURG'S POWER

The ecclesiastical clauses in the Treaty of Augsburg (1555) were continually disobeyed, bringing about renewed war between Catholics and Protestants in Germany. The signal for the outbreak came from Bohemia objecting to the succession of Emperor Matthias by the Catholic Hapsburg Ferdinand (1619-1637). With the aid of Spain, ruled also by Hapsburgs, Bohemia was subdued. Spain, with the help of Austria, reconquered Netherlands (divided since 1579) defeating them in the battle at Breda (1625). This culmination of Hapsburg success greatly alarmed the Northern Protestants. Denmark intervened unsuccessfully. Sweden, however, aided by France, was more fortunate, and, although Austria was not defeated, the intervention led to the Treaty of Prague (1634), providing certain protection to holders of ecclesiastical lands acquired before 1627. It was not until 1648, the Treaty of Westphalia, that this worst of the so-called religious wars came to a close. (World's History).

YOUR NEWSPAPER AND HOW IT IS MADE (Cont'd.) (Science)

Type and cuts, locked in page-size flat forms, must be converted into semi-cylindrical plates for printing on the press, the machine which makes the speedy production of a modern newspaper possible. The process of making this flat surface, composed of movable type and cuts, into a rigid, solid, curved plate is called stereotyping (in Greek stereo means rigid, typos letter). One modern method uses the "dry mat," an approximately 20"x24" flexible sheet of dry paper pulp of uniform thickness (0.024" to 0.040") for making a negative mold to be bent for casting a positive cylindrical plate. (1.) The dry mat, A, by seasoning in the "humidor" (dampening) obtains the necessary plasticity and is imposed on the flat form, B, placed in the rolling machine, C. The mat is then covered with a cork or felt (or both) blanket and a heavy roller, D, passes slowly over it (only once) to press the mat to the underlying cuts and types and to make a clear impression of the whole printing surface of the form. After removal of the impressed mat (negative) from the rolling machine, it is dried in the "roaster," where the moisture is evaporated before the casting of the positive plate, which is done in the autoplate machine. This machine melts and stores the type metal, receives the dried mat (negative) in a cylindrical mold, pumps the molten metal against the impressed mat-surface and delivers the printing plate (positive) in the form of a metal half-cylinder with the type and cuts embossed. (2.) Placing the dried mat, A, in one of the molds, B, of the autoplate machine. (3.) A side view of the autoplate machine with mat, A, placed in one of the opened molds, B. The cast plates, P, cool immediately and are removed, brought to the exact height and width in a trimming machine and fastened on the cylinders of the rotary press (4.).

THE PAPER MACHINE (One Cylinder Type) (Science)

Wood pulp, obtained in the pulp mill (see Pictorial Education for June 15, 1933) is heated with sodium hydroxide (soda pulp) or with calcium acid sulphit (sulphit pulp) to remove undesirable matter in the pulp cellulose. Other materials such as calcium sulphate, clay, etc., are added to give "body" to the pulp, which is then run through the paper machine for screening, drying and pressing into paper. Vat, A, is filled with pulp to a constant level; B, a revolving cylinder covered with wire-cloth, picks up a layer of fibers, which is taken over by endless felt belts, C1, C2, C3, supported by numerous rollers, R. The couch roll, D, presses C1 against B, causing necessary friction. Roll presses, E1, E2, E3, squeeze most of the water from the pulp, which becomes a sheet strong enough to be carried without support over steam-heated drying cylinders, F. The steam enters at the center, G, and the condensate is removed by a syphon, K. The paper sheet is then wound on reels, L1, L2, L3, slit into strips of standard width by slitter, M, N, and rewound around cores, S. The next and last group of operations is the finishing of the paper.

Study the Peace Treaties

Suddenly strikes us after years of belligerent paragraphing that there is something to this peace business if they get it working.

When the dog laps the same bowl with the cat and the wolf pals around with the rooster, then Utopia is here with the freight charges prepaid.

America has always had splendid isolation from the old world trouble. Mainly due to a couple of marcelled oceans.

When it comes to lurking in brackets we recommend the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans as fine old bomb-proof parentheses.

Maybe it was selfish of us to refuse to play marbles in the other man's back yard. But blame it on the Atlantic. It is a long trip, and reasons and fervor are apt to evaporate in transit.

There would be no trouble in the world if every army had to cross 3,000 miles of curly salt water. When you're hanging over the rail you ain't mad at anybody.

Now, after 15 years, all the nations want to be friends. The world is getting somewhere.

Signing peace documents hasn't meant much. That's because the signer, the signee and the signeroo each get a sheaf of amicable parchments thicker than a New England mince pie.

They riffle the sheets casually and slap the John Henry at the bottom. Then the documents are put away on the shelf. Nobody reads them at any time.

Now here's a half-witted idea carried to the fourth idiotic dimension. Instead of signing at the bottom of protocols and pacts, why not eliminate the signatures and compel the big guys to memorize them?

Each day, have a treaty recitation contest.

That will keep the subject alive instead of allowing it to wither in the vaults.

Nobody should be eligible for diplomatic service unless he can recite the various treaties verbatim from memory instead of ad lib.

Well Done, Mr. Park!

The District Attorney Deserves Credit for His Activity In the Monaca Jury-Fixing Case.

Our compliments to District Attorney Andrew T. Park for his activity in the Monaca Club jury-fixing case, which has resulted in a number of arrests. He deserves special credit because he handled the job practically single-handed, not having received the co-operation from other law-enforcing agencies that he had a right to expect.

The Sun-Telegraph has criticized Mr. Park more than once because of his slowness to proceed in criminal cases involving persons prominent in public and political life. We did this reluctantly, and only because we regarded it as a duty. It is far more pleasant to praise, and it is with genuine pleasure that we congratulate the District Attorney on his handling of the Monaca Club case.

The charge of jury-fixing, in our opinion, is more important than the original charges of gambling and bootlegging, because jury-fixing tends to sap the foundations of government itself. If juries can be influenced by bribery or otherwise to ignore the evidence and the law, justice fails. Hence the necessity of vigor and sternness in dealing with cases of tampering.

Jury-fixing is no less of a challenge to the people than election fraud. Both destroy confidence and make for contempt of law and government. So long as our governmental institutions function normally, the citizens can face evil conditions with the quiet assurance that they have it in their power to correct them. Let that assurance be lost, and there will be trouble.

Consequently it is incumbent on the authorities to treat these threats to government not as petty offenses but as serious crimes. Attempts, probably sometimes successful, to corrupt juries and steal elections, have become almost commonplace in Allegheny County. This is due to the failure of the courts to punish the culprits severely.

The State Motor Patrol reports that drunken drivers were involved in 57 automobile accidents last month, as compared with 75 in May, 1932. Drunken pedestrians figured in 42 accidents last month, as against 28 in May, 1932. On the whole, then, drunkenness was less of a factor in motor crashes than before legal beer returned. Beer has thus been shown to promote sobriety.

Irreconcilable prohibitionists who opposed the legalizing even of beer, with its low alcoholic content, predicted that "3.2" would make the streets and highways more unsafe than formerly. If they are honest, they will admit they were mistaken. If they are sensible, they will desist from the impossible task of prohibiting people from drinking anything more than one-half of one per cent alcoholic, but will try to persuade them to drink beer and wine instead of whisky and gin.

Unquestionably the return of legal beer has weaned innumerable Pittsburghers from the hard liquors of the bootleggers, with resultant improvement in sobriety. While there are occasional individuals who become drunk after inordinate indulgence in beer, the experience of the last two months has shown that the stimulating effect on most persons is too slight to merit the term "intoxication," as it is commonly understood.

Society is safer by reason of the capture in Cleve- land yesterday of John Maug and Edward Turpac, who escaped from the Western Penitentiary on April 27. These men are desperate criminals, and the very fact that they were attempting a holdup when caught is evidence that so long as they were at large they were a menace. Seemingly they are incapable of leading inoffensive lives.

Normal persons, condemned to long terms of im- prisonment, would refrain, if they succeeded in escaping, from the commission of fresh crimes which would again place them in jeopardy. But Maug and Turpac apparently belong to that class of criminals known to penologists as "recidivists," a word derived from the Latin for "backsliders."

Recidivists, the penologists tell us, are hopeless— nothing but a miracle will reform them. There are other criminals amenable to reformation, they say, who can be depended upon never to offend again. This makes it easier to understand the saying of certain penal authorities that criminals are of two classes—those that never ought to be put in prison, and those that ought never to be released from prison.

The Journal of Industrial Hygiene has an article about "Sulphur Dioxide in Pittsburgh Air," by Carlisle Schade, of the Mellon Institute. Air pollution is generally recognized by Pittsburgh physicians as a contributory factor in some of our ills. It is encouraging to learn that sulphur dioxide, which had been under suspicion, is present in our atmosphere in too small an amount to be a cause of concern from the hygienic standpoint.

The National Forest Reservation Commission announces the purchase of 4,815 acres of land at a cost of $17,061.50 for addition to the Allegheny National Forest, and of 4,966 acres at a cost of $12,986.40 for addition to the Monongahela National Forest. This is of direct local interest, for these forests were established primarily to help regulate the stream flow of the rivers from which they take their names and thus to protect Pittsburgh from floods.

Our main reliance for flood protection must be placed, however, on the plan for storage reservoirs at the headwaters of the rivers. The outlook for this project, it is gratifying to note, was never better. It fits well into the program of the administration at Washington for public works to relieve unemployment, and Pittsburgh is receiving help from other cities in the Ohio Valley.

The story of Sodom and Gomorrah is one of the most remarkable in ancient history. New light is shed on these wicked cities by an article in the American Weekly, distributed as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. In tomorrow's issue there will be an account of the evidence found by archeologists in the ruins of these communities of the evil practices which exasperated the Lord to destroy them.

Puck, the Comic Weekly, is another supplement of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph that will furnish an abundance of entertainment. In tomorrow's installment of "Bringing Up Father" Maggie tells Jiggs he is a big loafer and should get out and work. Jiggs obeys, with surprising results. "Tillie the Toiler," "Barney Google" and other favorites of the funnies are also to be found in Puck.

The racketeer must go. That is Washington's decree.

Attorney-General Cummings, with the aid of the Federal Department of Labor, and of the American Federation of Labor, is seeking ways and means to quell racketeering under the existing national laws.

More important, the United States Senate has authorized a nation-wide investigation of racketeering in all its phases by adoption of the Copeland resolution.

These are agencies which can be neither bribed nor intimidated.

With the backing of public opinion and of honest local and State officials, the Federal Government can put an end to our plague of racketeering which for years has disgraced the country.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 17.—Purely personal piffle: Sherwood Anderson writes the simplest prose and Cabell the most confusing. They have to drag me from fake auctions, and if no one is around I finger print clean mirrors. Ruth Bryan Owen is the most forceful looking of our envoys.

The most fascinating folk are those a bit mad. A lumber yard always suggests murder. The crime that interested me more than any other was the headless Pearl Bryan mystery. Second, the Stanford White shooting. I have a kid cousin who talks exactly like Betty Boop.

Richard Barthelmess has appeared in more wholesome films than any other star. My wife and I were the only audience left at the end of the first act of a premiere five years ago. But it was raining and we had no place to go. No one has a slyer sense of humor than John Ringling.

Russell Wilson was the only person to see me off at the train when I came to New York to live. And now look! He's mayor of Cincinnati. The only magazine I continue to read that irritates me is Time. I think death penalty should be certain for kidnaping. And life terms always for blackmailers.

* * *

I went out to spend a week-end with Joe McAuliffe in St. Louis and stayed seven weeks. It remains one of my favorite cities. And for a city its size, it's hard to tie Dayton, O. Now and then when I yank a sheet from my typewriter I yell "Copy!"—a reflex to editorial room days. I like to pronounce collaborator. Poignant and flamingo Jean Dixon puts over a line best among the cold pan comediennes.

* * *

I never tire of coffee ice cream at Schrafft's or sour cream with chives at Lindy's. And right this very second I could wolf one of those hamburger steaks with ground marrow at Luchow's. About twice a month I have to go rooting all over the house for a lost sock. Ornery is the ugliest word in the language.

* * *

After about two years I have quit calling a Sealyham a Sealingham. The locale interesting me most is the Arctic Circle. No joy equals that of the writer when what he is writing fairly leaps across the paper. I have never lunched at the Algonquin or Sardi's. One of the finest characters I know for years played Nana, a dog nurse in "Peter Pan." No city is so stimulating as Paris at 10 a. m. I can never think of a name when asked suddenly.

* * *

Men who like chitlins, corn cob pipes and sausage are worth cultivating. A most prized possession is a haircloth roundtop trunk which my grandparents toted crossing the continent in a covered wagon. For five months I roomed next door to Yvette Guilbert thinking she was Mme. Sembrich. Jack Benny gives me more chuckles than any other radio gag man. The most terrifying hour of night is 3 a. m., and the world will come to an end around 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Sez you! Irene Bordoni and Irene Franklin put over flip songs better than any contemporaries.

No modern hotel touches the old Waldorf for mellow grandeur and dignified hospitality. I hang around anywhere I see DeWolf Hopper talking just to hear his booming voice. Epictetus bores me and Emil Coleman is the sole orchestra leader to learn the charm of pianissimo. Visiting the Martin Johnsons one evening, the talk kept turning to Bessie and how charming she was. Later someone said Bessie must be home and opened a door. Out walked an orang-outang and made for me. That's one of the reasons I write stuff like this. I still think it a rotten gag.

* * *

I read the preface of every book. Also jacket blurbs and footnotes. I often, when talk grows collegiate, speak of dear old days at Bartlett's College. It was a commercial school for typewriting and shorthand. Once, growing fancy in an essay, I penned: "April yielded to May." And everytime the editor who received it writes me he makes some satirical reference. His last was: "Heard anything of amorous old April lately?" I have to put up with that sort of stuff to make a living.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

A stuffy, shabby little Sunday School room . . . with a Spring wind tumbling through the tree tops and a fat bee bumbling in the roses . . . and a bored little girl listening, half asleep, while a dry voice droned through the 'Ten C'mandmints."

"Remember the Sabbath Day, to keep it holy."

"—no other Gods before me; for I, thy Lord, am a jealous God."

What were they all about—those old, old laws, made so long ago, at the very beginning of things? What had they to do with a little girl in a flowered muslin dress and a droopy leghorn hat and her hair all corkscrewy with Saturday night curls?

Who wanted "other gods" any way? And why was the Real God mad if we had 'em? "A jealous God? What an old meanie God? What an old meanie God must be—flying into tantrums if somebody wanted just a little- teeny-weeny-bitty Other God! Now, s'posen I was a God—"

A little girl with her feet half way to the floor, wondering about God, dreaming about Life, envying the happy, tumbling wind, the bumbling bee. Stupid ole "Ten C'mandmints"

Do you remember? Were you like that too, my dear, in that tangled, sweet Yesterday that seems so near, so far? Did you, too, wonder why God was so mad; why His awful voice thundered so sternly "NO OTHER GOD BEFORE ME!" And did you learn that hardest of all lessons at last? But what a weary time it took!

Easy enough to understand the other laws. "Thou shalt not steal!" "Thou shalt not kill"... But this business of rival Gods—that seemed just a peevish mystery, didn't it?

Then slowly you began to see.

"Other Gods." They weren't your childhood images of clay and stone.

THEY WERE THE THINGS YOU WANTED MOST, LOVED MOST, WOULD DO MOST TO GET. THEY WERE THE THINGS YOU REALLY WORSHIPPED ALL THE TIME, NO MATTER WHAT "GOD" YOU PRETENDED TO FOLLOW IN YOUR SUNDAY-RELIGION.

There was Old Man Brown, for example. Everybody knew he worshiped money. "Why, he'd give his soul for money," people said. And he had really given his soul for money. There was nothing left of Old Man Brown's soul but a mean, hard clink.

And Mrs. Houghton—she worshiped her house. She was such a fussy housekeeper that her husband "dasn't call his home his own." Her God was really a Dust Cloth, even if she did think she was a good Baptist.

So it went. Young Bob Hypt—he worshiped booze; and his brother spent his days chasing women.

Ugly "other gods" all these—booze, money, women, fussy housekeeping.

But not all the "other gods" were ugly. Some were very beautiful; heart-breakingly beautiful. Yet they were as surely "Other Gods" as those other silly, vicious desires that filled the hearts of men and women. And you broke the law as surely if you put them before the One True God—and were as terribly punished.

Love. Sacrifice. Work. Thought. Even these shining, noble things could become "Other Gods," if you held them too dear? They could devour your life, as surely as any jungle monster of clay, if you gave so much of yourself to them that you forgot the ONE GOD, which was Life.

"THOU SHALT HAVE NO OTHER GODS BEFORE ME!" If you put the things YOU loved or hated or feared before the ONE, GREAT, HOLY PLAN OF LIFE—LIFE FOR EVERYONE—then you had "other gods," and you went away from life, and your heart dried up and rotted in you, like a branch that has been cut off from a tree.

That was the law—and that was the punishment.

But how long it took us to learn it, my dear; and what a terrible price we paid! What a terrible price the whole world is paying—mourning its lost wealth, its lost power—to learn that lesson!

BUT NEITHER A MAN NOR A NATION CAN BEGIN TO LIVE UNTIL HE HAS LEARNED IT.

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

Are you unfair in circulating evil reports about people?

Why are you so anxious to pass on a story that defames character?

You don't believe the story, but you have heard it and so repeat it.

The fact that you have mentioned it may give a false story the semblance of truth and the next one tells it for a fact, adding something, possibly.

Unfavorable reports travel much faster than the good things that might be said of a person.

There have been instances in your own life, harmless in themselves, which might have ruined your reputation if they had been repeated and enlarged as is usually the case in gossip.

You want others to be charitable, but are you charitable toward others?

Gossip and evil report often injure the one who tells or repeats them more than the one of whom they speak so unkindly.

Besides, the gossip leaves a bad taste in the mouths of those who hear and often causes the gossiper to be avoided.

Father D'Orgueval Contracts Leprosy—A Worthy Successor to Damien and Dutton—Their Heroic Ministry in Molokai

By EDWIN C. HILL

"WE SIT and grow bulky in our charming mansions and a plain, uncouth peasant steps into the battle, under the eyes of God, and succors the afflicted and consoles the dying and is himself afflicted in his turn and dies upon the field of honor."

These words—part of Robert Louis Stevenson's immortal defense of Joseph Damien de Veuster—leap before my eyes as I read the message from a green and grim peninsula of death, the message that Father Peter D'Orgueval has contracted leprosy and has gone from the mission house to live among the lepers and to die among them.

Far out there in the Pacific lies Molokai, the leper colony. Only 60 miles away are the palms, the sands and the ukeleles of the beach of Waikiki. But the narrow, palm-fringed peninsula of the lepers is isolated completely by the surrounding ocean and two towering walls of rock through which there is but a single guarded trail.

The Heroism of Damien and Dutton

LET me tell you the story of Damien, Dutton and D'Orgueval, and as I do I would have you remember that hundreds of men and women, clergy, doctors and nurses, have shared their trials and tribulations, have walled themselves up in the sacrifice which goes even beyond the precept of Him who said, "Greater love than this hath no man shown."

It was back in 1873 that Father Damien first went among the lepers in Molokai. And then they were the self-same outcasts that they had been ages before when they accosted the Gallilean on the dusty roads beyond the walls of Jerusalem and begged that they be made clean. Rotting, hounded and terrified, they hid themselves in the hills to avoid the concentration camp where, when they were captured, they were left to rot and die without benefit of man or God.

Soon this Belgian peasant priest, called by Sir Hugh Clifford "the single star of hope in a long night of human misery,' had a shamed world looking to the Sandwich Islands, as the Hawaiian group was then known.

An then it was that the word came to Lieut. Ira Barnes Dutton, of the 13th Wisconsin Volunteers, who, separated from his wife, was playing the gallant in and around Clarksville, Tenn., where, as a result of his services in the war of the states, he was stationed as a government agent. There are some very old ladies yet in Clarksville who remember the Capt. Dutton who led cotillions and caused flutters in the young female hearts of the countryside, who knew nothing of the wife in Wisconsin. And I will tell you, as they could much better, how the pagan Yankee came back to Tennessee after an absence and "got religion." He told of the wife who had died and he joined the Episcopal Church.

In a few years he was living among the Trappist monks of Gethsemane, Ky., that austere order among whose ritual is absolute silence and the turning of a shovel of dirt by each brother from the grave which some day will hold him. He did not join the order, but as a Roman Catholic layman found his way to Molokai and there joined Damien in 1886. The priest had contracted the disease the year before, to die of it in 1889, at the age of 48. A worthy successor was the Yankee soldier, who had come to be known among these poor wretched as Brother Joseph.

For forty-five years Ira B. Dutton labored in Molokai, binding terrible sores and consoling, what was worse, the mental agony of those condemned to a living death.

He died only recently at the fine age of eighty-seven and he went to his reward saying: "Though I always have had a hearty respect for the Angel of Death—a close acquaintance with him has caused a personal affection."

Seven Decorations For Gallantry

FATHER D'ORGUEVAL is the fourth chaplain in line from Father Damien and has been eight years in the leper colony. Before the war—he is sixty-one years old now—he was a famous preacher in Paris. Off to the front he went, to be one of the first Frenchmen to receive the decoration of the Legion of Honor, to receive six more decorations for gallantry in action and to reach the rank of Captain. A throat ailment caused by his being gassed prevented his return to the pulpit, whereupon Father D'Orgueval volunteered for work among the lepers.

His utter disregard for safeguards resulted in his contracting the disease which is not highly contagious and which infrequently attacks a white person.

The Molokai of Father D'Orgueval is much different than the place which Damien and Dutton first knew. Cottages, flowers, gardens and the radio are there now, with hospitals and doctors. Perhaps there will be some surcease in these. Not that they matter to him. For these Damiens, Duttons, D'Orguevals, Asburys and Livingstons put to shame the heroes of the sword and we laborers in the vineyard who can look on only in awe at the courage and the faith which surpasses all understanding.

HOPELESS LOVE

By Winifred Black

The sporting man died the other day.

Odd sort of fellow—he was. Feared, hated, despised—loved, respected, trusted.

He never pretended to be anything but a sporting man.

He owned and operated dance halls and shady cabarets, and pool halls that were known to be resorts of gangsters and professional gamblers.

He never drank a drop himself, he didn't even smoke, but he could mix 50 different varieties of cocktails—every one of them deadly.

He was handy with a gun and once, when there was a newspaper crusade on vice, he appeared at the desk of the managing editor—dapper, neat as a pin, freshly shaved and he had a very businesslike looking automatic in his sinewy right hand.

Before the managing editor could reach for the bell under his desk—the sporting man pushed him gently back into his chair with the butt of the automatic.

"Don't ring, Jim," said the sporting man. "I just came up to tell you that my name don't go on that list you printed—see!"

The name went on the list just the same, but that particular editor found it convenient to spend a month or two on the Riviera.

Dangerous fellow, the sporting man.

But to the people of his own world he was an idol. He was always paying the hospital bill for some poor down and outer.

Always lecturing some foolish boy, and sending him home to his mother. And whenever he saw a pretty young girl in one of his places, he watched her carefully, and if she acted as if she really did not belong there—he sent her home with an admonition that was apt to ring in her ears for quite a good while.

He married a woman of his own type, hung her in diamonds, wreathed her in rubies and bought her fur coats by the half dozen.

But when he was dying, he whispered to the doctor and asked if the dictor knew by any chance a certain woman.

"Yes," said the doctor, "I know her—what of it?"

"Will you ask her to park her car out there in the street by my window for just a few minutes," gasped the sporting man. "I'd like to get a glimpse of her before I step along. She doesn't know me, but I've known her ever since I was 16 years old.

"She used to walk by my place every day and I followed her for years—I always hoped she would drop her purse or something, and give me a chance just to speak to her—once, she's a good woman—I guess I'm kind of foolish about her—yet, do you suppose she'll come?"

But before the "good woman" could get the message the sporting man was dead.

Queer world we live in, and queer creatures we are, we dull eyed, coldhearted, critical, cynical men and women who live in it.

The only thing that's important about this story is that it is absolutely true—and that makes any story interesting—doesn't it?
